15 Be it ordained by the People of the City and County of San Francisco:

16 Section 1. Findings and Purpose.

17 (a) When people are convicted of a crime, they are often charged thousands of dollars
18 in fines, fees, or financial penalties related to their conviction, sentence, or incarceration – in 19 addition, in many cases, to their serving time in jail or prison. These financial exactions are 20 intended to generate revenue for public programs and to fund their operations. But there is 21 often an insidious, unintended consequence of this practice – to push people into poverty, or 22 push them even deeper into poverty if they already were there. These fines, fees, and 23 penalties can trap people in a cycle of debt, and low-income people and people of color are 24 often hit the hardest. Under this system, government becomes a driver of inequality, creating 25 additional layers of punishment for those moving through the criminal justice system.

1 (b) More specifically, these financial burdens frequently hit individuals at the precise
2 moment they are trying to turn their lives around. The vast majority of people exiting jail or 3 prison are unemployed, have unstable housing, have no steady source of income, and find
4 work difficult or nearly impossible to obtain after release. Approximately 80% of individuals in
5 jail are indigent. Yet, after someone has already served their time, they frequently receive a
6 bill for a long list of fines and fees to pay for probation, fingerprinting, and mandated user fees.
7 According to a report by the Ella Baker Center, the average debt incurred for court-related
8 fines and fees of over 700 people surveyed was $13,607, nearly equal to the annual income
9 for respondents in the survey.

10 (c) In San Francisco, people who have spent time in jail or prison or have been
11 involved in the criminal justice system are charged a long list of fines and fees. The Public
12 Defender's Office found that people participating in its Clean Slate Program have received
13 bills for approximately 25 fees for administrative functions such as automated record keeping,
14 a court operations assessment, a DNA identification program, state court construction penalty,
15 an automated fingerprint fund, and emergency medical services. The monthly probation fee
16 appears to impose the most debt on those who have been involved in the criminal justice
17 system in San Francisco, where people are charged $50 a month to be on probation. These 18 individuals are charged $1,800 up-front when they start their probation, as probation typically 19 lasts for three years.

20 (d) The fines and fees incurred by those involved in the criminal justice system in San 21 Francisco are substantial. People in the Clean Slate program typically owe $3,000 to $5,000
22 in criminal justice fines and fees, according to a sample of clients examined by the Clean
23 Slate Program. The men and women paying these fines and fees are typically unemployed,
24 and earn wages, if at all, well below the federal poverty level. Clean Slate participants are 25 disproportionately people of color. Indeed, the burden of these fines and fees falls heaviest

1 on the African-American community, which accounts for less than 6% of the population in San
2 Francisco, but makes up over half the population in the county jail.

3 (e) Left unpaid, these fines and fees can grow in size, and can result in wage
4 garnishment and levies on bank accounts, to the extent there are wages to garnish or a bank
5 account to draw upon. The fines and fees make it harder for people to cover their expenses
6 and therefore can create burdens for others. For example, the Ella Baker Center study stated
7 that family members often pay the fines and fees on behalf of their loved ones, and over 20%
8 of families had to take out a loan to cover the costs of these fines and fees.

9 (f) Furthermore, research shows that these fines and fees are often an inefficient
10 source of revenue. Researchers at the University of California, Berkeley, among other 11 researchers, have found that some criminal justice fines and fees are “High Pain” (hitting poor 12 people particularly hard) and “Low Gain” (bringing in very little revenue), as the fees are 13 charged to people who often cannot afford to pay them. Both the White House Council of 14 Economic Advisors and the Conference of State Court Administrators have found that these 15 legal financial obligations are often an ineffective and inefficient means of raising revenue.

16 (g) San Francisco has a long history of leadership in this area: It is the only county that 17 has never charged fees to parents of children who have been incarcerated in Juvenile Hall,
18 and was the first county court in the state to stop suspending driver’s licenses for unpaid fines
19 and fees. With this ordinance, San Francisco becomes the first county in California to 20 eliminate the criminal justice fines, fees, and financial penalties under its control, that so
21 disadvantage the most vulnerable in our society. By removing these financial burdens and the 22 outstanding debt they create that hangs over thousands of families, San Francisco hopes to 23 inspire other jurisdictions to lift this burden off of low-income families, and to find more fair and 24 just ways to fund their criminal justice systems.

1 (h) The City urges the San Francisco Superior Court to modify any prior orders to
2 eliminate the fine, fees, and penalties included in this ordinance, and to discharge all debt
3 associated with the same, to the extent permitted by law. The City urges the Public Defender
4 to assist individuals in seeking modification of court orders to pay fines, fees, and penalties
5 covered by this ordinance. Finally, to the extent permitted by law, the City urges all City
6 departments to stop collecting the fines, fees, and penalties covered by this ordinance.

Dear Supervisors,

San Francisco Board of Supervisors President London Breed has introduced legislation to eliminate several court fees that have been plaguing San Franciscans impacted by the criminal justice system. These fees can add up to thousands of dollars of debt and prevent people coming home from jail or prison from getting back on their feet. As a member of the Debt Free SF Coalition and an organization with a 40 year history of fighting for the civil and human rights of people with convictions, Legal Services for Prisoners with Children (LSPC) believes that government services should not be funded on the backs of our city's most vulnerable residents.

Criminal justice fines and fees restrict the economic mobility of reentering people. Approximately 80 percent of individuals in jail are indigent. Yet, after someone has already served their time, they frequently receive a bill for a long list of fines and fees, including probation costs, fingerprinting costs, and mandated user fees. According to a survey of over 700 people conducted by the Ella Baker Center, the average debt incurred for court-related fines and fees on one case was $13,607.

In San Francisco, the burden of these fines and fees falls heaviest on the African-American community, which accounts for less than 6 percent of the population but makes up over half the population in the county's jails. Not only does charging San Franciscans thousands of dollars for criminal fines strip communities of color of resources, but research also shows that these fines and fees are an inefficient source of revenue, with the costs of trying to collect from people who can't afford to pay often nearing or exceeding the revenue actually collected.

With this proposed ordinance, the City and County of San Francisco becomes the first county in California to eliminate the criminal justice fines and fees under its control. Our city has the power to inspire other municipalities to seriously confront economic injustice in the criminal justice system. San Francisco does not have to fund its budget by stripping resources from formerly incarcerated people, many of whom are already facing homelessness and unemployment.

For these reasons, LSPC strongly urges you to support the proposed legislation to eliminate criminal fines and fees used to fund city services.

Dear Supervisors,

San Francisco Board of Supervisors President London Breed has introduced legislation to eliminate several court fees that have been systematically harming San Franciscans caught up in the criminal justice system. These fees, used to fund city services, can add up to thousands of dollars of debt and create obstacles to successful re-entry. This practice pushes people into poverty, with people of color often hit the hardest. These financial penalties can make government a driver of inequality and further damage communities that are struggling to maintain their place in this city.

Fines and fees in the criminal justice system, including court and probation costs, restrict the economic mobility of people reentering society from jail or prison. Approximately 80 percent of individuals in jail are indigent. Yet, after someone has served their time, they frequently receive a bill for a long list of fines and fees, including probation costs, fingerprinting costs, and mandated user fees. According to a survey of over 700 people conducted by the Ella Baker Center, the average debt incurred for court-related fines and fees on one case was $13,607.

In San Francisco, the burden of these fines and fees falls heaviest on the African-American community, which accounts for less than 6 percent of the population but makes up over half the population in the county's jails. We must end the cycle of poverty that results from policies that impose crippling debt on our city's marginalized communities. Not only does charging San Franciscans thousands of dollars for criminal fines strip communities of color of resources, but research also shows that these fines and fees are an inefficient source of revenue, with the costs of trying to collect from people who can't afford to pay often nearing or exceeding the revenue actually collected.

San Francisco does not have to fund its budget on the backs of our most vulnerable residents, many of whom are already facing homelessness and unemployment.

It is not enough for San Francisco to simply acknowledge that our criminal justice system is broken. We must actively lead the charge to reform these laws and, in doing so, challenge the rest of the country to make vulnerable populations a priority. For these reasons, I strongly urge you to support the proposed legislation to eliminate criminal fines and fees used to fund city services. As someone born and raised in California, and who has worked on criminal justice issues as an intern with the Ella Baker Center for Human Rights, Legal Services for Prisoners With Children, the Rhode Island Department of Health, and the Center for Prisoner Health and Human Rights, I strongly believe in the importance of this ordinance. The San Francisco Board of Supervisors needs to take a stand against this injustice, and lead the rest of the state and nation in criminal justice reform.

Dear Supervisors,

Greenbridge Corporate Counsel supports San Francisco Board of Supervisors President London Breed's legislation to eliminate several court fees that have been plaguing San Franciscans caught up in the criminal justice system. Greenbridge represents businesses in the legal cannabis industry, whose leaders would previously have been criminalized.

Court fees, used to fund certain city services, can add up to thousands of dollars of debt for people who have served their time and create obstacles to successfully moving on to productive lives. The unintended consequence of this practice is to push people into poverty, with people of color often hit the hardest. These financial penalties can make government a driver of inequality and further damage communities that are struggling to maintain their place in this city.

Fines and fees in the criminal justice system, including court and probation costs, restrict the economic mobility of people reentering society from jail or prison. Approximately 80 percent of individuals in jail are indigent. Yet, after someone has already served their time, they frequently receive a bill for a long list of fines and fees, including probation costs, fingerprinting costs, and mandated user fees. According to a survey of over 700 people conducted by the Ella Baker Center, the average debt incurred for court-related fines and fees on one case was $13,607.

In San Francisco, the burden of these fines and fees falls heaviest on the African-American community, which accounts for less than 6 percent of the population but makes up over half the population in the county's jails. We must end the cycle of poverty that results from policies that impose crippling debt on our city's marginalized communities. Not only does charging San Franciscans thousands of dollars for criminal fines strip communities of color of resources, but research also shows that these fines and fees are an inefficient source of revenue, with the costs of trying to collect from people who can't afford to pay often nearing or exceeding the revenue actually collected.

With this proposed ordinance, the City and County of San Francisco would become the first county in California to eliminate the criminal justice fines and fees under its control. Our city has the power to inspire other municipalities to seriously confront economic injustice in the criminal justice system. San Francisco does not have to fund its budget on the backs of our most vulnerable residents, many of whom are already facing homelessness and unemployment.

It is not enough for San Francisco to simply acknowledge that our criminal justice system is broken. We must actively lead the charge to reform these laws and, in doing so, challenge the rest of the country to prioritize vulnerable populations. For these reasons, Greenbridge Corporate Counsel strongly urges you to support the proposed legislation to eliminate criminal fines and fees used to fund city services.

Dear Supervisors,

San Francisco Board of Supervisors President London Breed has introduced legislation to eliminate several court fees that have been plaguing San Franciscans impacted by the criminal justice system. These fees can add up to thousands of dollars of debt and prevent people coming home from jail or prison from getting back on their feet. As a member of the Debt Free SF Coalition and an organization with a 40 year history of fighting for the civil and human rights of people with convictions, Legal Services for Prisoners with Children (LSPC) believes that government services should not be funded on the backs of our city's most vulnerable residents.

Criminal justice fines and fees restrict the economic mobility of reentering people. Approximately 80 percent of individuals in jail are indigent. Yet, after someone has already served their time, they frequently receive a bill for a long list of fines and fees, including probation costs, fingerprinting costs, and mandated user fees. According to a survey of over 700 people conducted by the Ella Baker Center, the average debt incurred for court-related fines and fees on one case was $13,607.

Dear Supervisors,

San Francisco Board of Supervisors President London Breed has introduced legislation to eliminate several court fees that have been systematically harming San Franciscans caught up in the criminal justice system.
