1 [Housing Code – Residential Hotel Notice Posting Requirement.]

3 Ordinance amending the San Francisco Housing Code by amending Section 1002 to 4 add subsection (f) requiring residential hotel owners/operators to post a notice
5 advising hotel occupants that they may telephone the City's Customer Service Center
6 at 311 to report alleged violations of the Housing Code; adopting findings, including
7 environmental findings.

8 NOTE: Additions are single-underline italics Times New Roman;
9 deletions are ~~strike-through italics Times New Roman~~.
10 Board amendment additions are double-underlined;
Board amendment deletions are ~~strikethrough normal~~.

11 Be it ordained by the People of the City and County of San Francisco:

12 Section 1. Findings.

13 Section 2. The San Francisco Housing Code is hereby amended by amending Section
14 1002, to read as follows:

15 SEC. 1002. ADDITIONAL SUBSTANDARD CONDITIONS: ELECTRICAL OUTLETS,
16 ELEVATORS, ILLEGAL CONVERSION OF RESIDENTIAL HOTELS, AND RESIDENTIAL
17 HOTEL MAIL RECEPTACLES AND NOTICE POSTING.

18 In addition to the provisions set forth in Section 1001 of this chapter prescribed by 19 California Health and Safety Code, Division 13, Part 1.5, State Housing Law, Sections
20 17920.3 et seq., the following conditions are considered substandard:

21 (a) Electrical Outlets. Habitable rooms and kitchens with insufficient number of 22 electrical convenience outlets as required by Section 504 of this Code.

23 (b) Elevators. Lack of elevator service as required by Section 713 of this Code.

1 (c) Illegal Conversion of Residential Hotels. Illegal conversion of any residential unit
2 of a residential hotel, or improper recordkeeping as defined and required by Chapter 41 of the 3 San Francisco Administrative Code.

4 (d) Mold and Mildew. The existence of mold and mildew which is chronic or severe
5 as defined by Chapter 4 of this code.

6 (e) Residential Hotel Mail Receptacles. Lack of an individual mail receptacle for 7 each residential unit in a residential hotel, as required by Section 41E of the San Francisco
8 Administrative Code. The hotel owner is responsible for making arrangements with the United 9 States Postal Service for the installation of these receptacles and delivery of mail thereto.
10 Installation and maintenance of the mail receptacles shall meet all of the specifications and 11 requirements of the United States Postal Service. Compliance with United States Postal 12 Service specifications and requirements, and delivery of mail by the United States Postal 13 Service, will not be enforced by the Department of Building Inspection.

14 (f) Residential Hotel Notice Posting Requirement. The owner or operator of a residential
15 hotel, as defined in Chapter 41 of the San Francisco Administrative Code, shall post a notice approved
16 by the Department of Building Inspection notifying the occupants that they may contact the City and 17 County of San Francisco's 24x7 Customer Service Center at 311 to report alleged violations of this 18 Code. The notice shall be posted in a conspicuous location at the lobby. If there is no lobby, the notice
19 shall be posted in the public entranceway.

MORE THAN JUST A CALL CENTER – SAN FRANCISCO'S 311 NOW IMPROVES ACCESS TO BUILDING SAFETY AND HEALTH SERVICES

Collaborative of Low-Income Housing Advocates, City Departments and Elected Officials Expand San Francisco's Customer Service Hotline

SAN FRANCISCO (January 26, 2010)...

"I am proud to announce that we have expanded the capabilities of our 311 Customer Service Center to include taking SRO complaints. This change will improve the quality of life for residents and make the owners of our SRO's more accountable," said Mayor Gavin Newsom. "Now, if you have a problem with your SRO, there is only one number to remember to dial – 311."

San Francisco's most vulnerable tenants now have a new resource to raise the quality of their living accommodations and improve affordable housing stock citywide. Thanks to a unique collaboration between SRO residents, housing advocates, several city departments and Supervisor Campos' office, SRO residents will now be able to dial 311, the City of San Francisco's customer service center, to fix a variety of problems in their buildings.

At the "SRO Tenant Empowerment Teach-In event today at Dolores Street Community Services, representatives from nonprofits and city departments answered questions and showed SRO residents how to access services to improve and stabilize their lives, including an introduction to the new services at 311, which has been expanded to address building safety and health issues that are specific to SRO's.

"Adapting 311 to make it more accessible for SRO residents will enable them to solve problems that their landlords haven't resolved," said Josh Vining, a community organizer for the Mission SRO Collaborative, the housing advocacy group which led the community effort. "Issues like rodents, inadequate heat or water, and blocked fire exits are a reality for low-income residents. 311 now gives people a way to report unhealthy or unsafe conditions and to follow-up on the solution."

"We're proud to offer this kind of customer service for SRO tenants and residents," said Supervisor David Campos. "We owe it to the SRO community for bringing this issue to the forefront, and helping us figure out an improved solution that will really benefit everyone who lives in San Francisco. I am also pleased to introduce legislation today which will require SRO buildings to post visible notices that inform tenants that they can call 311 to report violations of the housing code."

In early 2009, members of the Mission SRO Collaborative completed a survey of SRO residents which identified several endemic building issues including pests, fire safety, second-hand smoke in common areas, plumbing and electrical problems. This survey also showed that while residents are aware of code violations and building problems, these problems are not being adequately resolved because they are not getting reported to the City. Barriers for residents to lodge complaints included a lack of knowledge of appropriate city departments; language issues; fear of eviction; or having no access to a computer or phone. Recognizing that the vast majority of these issues were building and fire code violations, the group identified 311 as a potential solution.

Launched in 2007, San Francisco's 311 Customer Service Center allows the public to ask questions or request services using an easy to-remember phone number. Although people normally use 311 for issues like potholes, graffiti, parks and other outdoor issues, the Mission SRO Collaborative understood that 311 also provides information about the H1N1 flu, how to help homeless residents, and marriage license appointments. The Collaboratives and the Department of Public Health approached 311, hoping to use the same integrated City services to address residential building issues.

The Collaboratives and 311 formed a working group of City departments and elected officials, mapping the common problems reported by residents to the appropriate City department that could ensure resolution. Residents calling 311 to report problems will reach a trained and courteous Customer Service Representative who will record the issue, provide an expected response time, and provide a service request number so the resident can follow up on the request.

"I'm excited about the customization and technological improvements made by our staff and the Department of Technology to launch this project," said Nancy Alfaro, 311's Director. "It will minimize duplicative requests to agencies and also eliminates the guess work for residents. They don't need to worry whether they should call the Fire Department or Building Inspection to report a blocked fire exit, for example, as the issue will get routed to the appropriate agency. Additionally, we hope tenants will become educated about 311 as a resource for these services as well as others."

Moreover, calls to 311 are now free from most San Francisco payphones and 311 Customer Service Representatives can assist callers in over 175 languages, providing the capability to help many of the monolingual and limited English speaking population. These services may also be requested online at <http://www.sfgov.org/311>

"I am so glad to have this resource to help solve many of our problems," said Thomas Jenkins, an SRO tenant involved in the project. "I feel like we finally have a voice – a little more power over our own lives."

"I have never been afraid to stand up for my rights or to call in complaints to the City," said Cynthia Citizen, a tenant of a private SRO on 16th St. "But I haven't always known the City codes or who to call. Now I know that I can just call 311 to register code violations in my building. It has become easier for tenants like me to do our part."

About Mission SRO Collaborative

In 2008, the Mission SRO Collaborative, a program of Dolores Street Community Services, received a grant from the San Francisco Tobacco Free Project to implement a community process to identify and reduce second-hand smoke in SRO buildings. That process led to this project. The Mission SRO Collaborative was formed as a response to a rash of SRO fires in the late 90s that displaced hundreds of tenants and eroded the availability of affordable housing stock. SRO tenants were proactive in calling for changes to keep them safe and ensure a comparable level of emergency services to that of apartment-dwellers. The Collaborative believes that members of the SRO community are best suited to prioritize their needs and to develop solutions for those needs.

About 311

Since its launch in 2007, 311 has made it easier for residents to access city services, and answered more than seven million calls. The service – available at no charge by dialing 311 on phones in the City – provides 24-7 assistance to residents, visitors, and businesses seeking non-emergency city services.
