8 WHEREAS, 100 Americans die every day from gun violence and more than twice as 9 many people are shot and survive; and

10 WHEREAS, California's local communities suffer from the tragic effects of gun violence 11 as it cuts short thousands of lives every year, depresses the quality of life of whole 12 neighborhoods, and also makes it harder for schools, businesses, and community institutions 13 to thrive while also furthering economic and racial disparities; and

14 WHEREAS, There are a number of local violence reduction intervention and prevention 15 programs that have had helped reduce gun violence in California's hardest hit communities; 16 and

17 WHEREAS, The California Violence Intervention and Prevention program (CalVIP) is 18 an essential source of funding for these programs, which work to support localities to help 19 sustain life-saving work; and

1           WHEREAS, Failing to address gun violence has both fiscal and moral consequences,
2 costing California taxpayers millions annually in healthcare, law enforcement and criminal 3 justice costs; and

4           WHEREAS, The financial burden on the state does not even begin to capture the toll of 5 the lives lost, nor does it account for the effect on local communities, which are often torn 6 apart as a result of gun violence; and

7           WHEREAS, These tragic incidents of gun violence disproportionately affect Black 8 Californians, who are 10 times more likely to die by gun homicide than their white neighbors 9 and Hispanics, who are two times more likely to die by gun homicide; and

10           WHEREAS, Cities like Oakland, Los Angeles, Richmond and Stockton have received 11 funding from the state for their violence reduction efforts and have experienced impressive 12 reductions in their homicides rates; and
