budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sara de la Riva
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: katie.markov@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Katie Markov
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 2:45:02 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Katie Markov
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: carolynkenady@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Carolyn Kenady
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 4:37:39 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Kenady
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: mward@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of McKenzie Ward
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 5:31:32 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
McKenzie Ward
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: brady.c.317@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Chris Brady
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 6:44:20 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Chris Brady
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: cloudsrest789@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of KAREN WONG
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 8:53:43 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
KAREN WONG
San Francisco, CA 94108

From: sayre@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sayre Ziskin
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 9:26:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sayre Ziskin
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: Jiwen Zeng
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 9:36:10 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不現實的。我要求的是明顯減少正在侵蝕我們城市的露天毒品銷售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Jiwen Zeng
evazeng8828@gmail.com
1810 27th Ave
San Francisco, CA94122

From: kristenleigh@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kristen Raymond
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 10:03:34 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kristen Raymond
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: erinuyttewaal@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Erin Uyttewaal
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 10:59:37 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Erin Uyttewaal
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: margaret.lilani@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Margaret Lilani
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 11:29:13 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Margaret Lilani
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: hello.nabibi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nabi Cheung-Cuono
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 11:54:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nabi Cheung-Cuono
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: v.vargas17@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Vanessa Vargas
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 1:02:42 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Vanessa Vargas
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: scottmacphersonsf@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Scott Macpherson
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 1:17:43 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Scott Macpherson
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: anderson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Anderson Timoteo da Silva
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 2:44:11 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Anderson Timoteo da Silva
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: martymurphy04@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Martin Murphy
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 7:15:48 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Martin Murphy
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: jossikins@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Josselyn Eccleston
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 8:53:57 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Josselyn Eccleston
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: melissaippo@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Melissa Ippolito
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 9:41:04 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Melissa Ippolito
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: Chunyan Chen
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 10:03:59 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不现实的。我要求的是明显減少正在侵蚀我们城市的露天毒品销售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Chunyan Chen
callielui@yahoo.com
254 Hahn street
San Francisco , California 94134

From: maulikgshah@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Maulik Shah
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 10:17:31 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Maulik Shah
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: johnnylewiscorey@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of John Corey
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 10:28:15 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
John Corey
San Francisco, CA 94114

181 O'Farrell St, #306
San Francisco, CA 94102
June 17, 2023

Budget and Finance Committee
City and County of San Francisco

Dear Members of the Budget and Finance Committee:

I am writing on behalf of the Union Square Alliance to provide enthusiastic support for the Powell Street funding which has been proposed by Mayor Breed and Board President Peskin as part of the FY 23-4 budget.

Union Square is the gateway to San Francisco for over 10 million visitors per year. It generates over 15% of the City's annual sales tax revenue and is home to 12,000 hotel rooms. Perhaps most importantly, the Union Square district provides thousands of lower- and middle-income jobs, including hotel workers, restaurant workers, shop workers, janitors, and security personnel. Many of these jobs will be at risk if the District fails to thrive in the future.

Powell Street, in turn, is the gateway to Union Square. Every day, 9,000 people exit BART at Powell, with many more coming from Muni light rail and buses. Each day, 6,000 people walk up and down the blocks of Powell between Market Street and Geary. The Powell cable car turnaround, at Market Street, is where most visitors access the cable cars, which consistently rank as the number one visitor attraction in San Francisco.

The three blocks of Powell Street between Market and Geary are now in very poor condition, both in terms of empty storefronts and physical degradation of the street environment. While the blocks in the Union Square district which are home to luxury retail look very nice, these blocks of Powell, traditionally home to more affordable and eating places, are in bad shape. Ground floor vacancy rates along these blocks are at historically high rates.

Mayor Breed and Board President Peskin have proposed $2 million to improve the physical streetscape environment (to be added to $2 million from the SFMTA) as well as $2 million for tenant attraction into empty storefronts along Powell.

The $2 million proposed to incentivize filling these critical retail storefront spaces will help to "sweeten the pot" for prospective tenants who are considering signing a lease in one of these spaces. These funds could be used to:

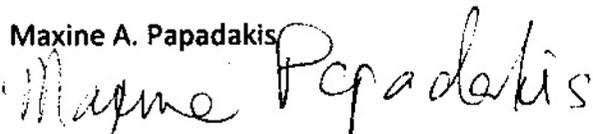

- Fund targeted tax incentives passed through to new or retained businesses that commit or recommit to these blocks
- Support tenant improvements or façade improvements for key spaces
- Fund increased cleaning and/or security services for these blocks
- Fund enhanced marketing and tenant attraction services for these blocks

The total of $4 million for physical improvements to the Powell Street pedestrian experience would allow us to create meaningful improvements to the pedestrian experience on this critical gateway corridor, including:

- Removal of the existing parklets
- Widening of the sidewalks without major disruptive concrete reconstruction
- Resurfacing of the sidewalks
- Inclusion of appropriate lighting, landscape elements, and potentially art and interpretive elements related to the history of the cable cars, for example

We would like to thank the Board again for its attention to the revival of San Francisco's irreplaceable downtown and look forward to your support for these critical budget items.

Very truly yours,

Maxine A. Papadakis

Homeowner in the Union Square District

From: alwong@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Al Wong
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 2:54:47 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Al Wong
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: lwchoi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lucia Choi
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 3:47:38 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lucia Choi
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: Annie Young
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 4:17:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不现实的。我要求的是明显減少正在侵蚀我们城市的露天毒品销售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Annie Young
munnyoung@gmail.com
2090 34th Ave
San Francisco , California 94116

From: jaxsonbrwn@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jacqueline Murphy
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 5:01:09 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jacqueline Murphy
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: searabia@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Silvia E Arabia
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 6:52:12 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Silvia E Arabia
San Francisco, CA 94134

From: carolinsturtevant@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Carolyn Sturtevant
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 5:48:02 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Carolin Sturtevant
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: tim@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Timothy Feeley
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 6:09:15 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Timothy Feeley
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: dobbs027@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Laura Dobbs
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 6:24:45 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Laura Dobbs
Alameda, CA 94501

From: sbernard19@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Susan Bernard
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:20:10 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Susan Bernard
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: thl001@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Thomas Lee
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:33:46 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Thomas Lee
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: yanani1226@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Yanee Buorn
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 3:08:34 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Yanee Buorn
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: lawrence-gordon@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lawrence Gordon
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 6:03:54 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lawrence Gordon
San Francisco, CA 94131

From: crdevou@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Colette Devou
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 3:58:53 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Colette Devou
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: esotericquiddess@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Amanda Tucker
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 5:01:01 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Amanda Tucker
Oakland, CA 94601

From: karstenmaedje@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Karsten Maedje
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 6:04:43 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Karsten Maedje
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: my4987@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of My Nguyen
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 6:45:37 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
My Nguyen
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: ronalduro@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Ronald Tura
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 6:53:17 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Ronald Tura
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: jmmackowski@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of J.Matthew Mackowski
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:01:12 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
J. Matthew Mackowski
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: hnchung@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Howard Chung
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:06:41 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Howard Chung
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: patricia.casper77@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Trish Casper
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:59:46 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Trish Casper
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: lois@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lois Chess
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 12:58:29 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lois Chess
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: brendo109@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Brendan Murphy
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 5:56:24 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Brendan Murphy
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: test@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nikita Annt
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:17:46 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nikita Annt
94100

From: b.bice23@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Brian Bice
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:44:31 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Brian Bice
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: pattyjer2911@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Patty Santamaria
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:54:04 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Patty Santamaria
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: danielandrez3@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Andreza Cezario
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:22:02 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Andreza Cezario
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: nedra\_ruiz@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nedra Ruiz
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:23:40 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nedra Ruiz
Belvedere Tiburon, CA 94920

From: markzier@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mark Zier
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 8:51:58 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mark Zier
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: jlcawthorne@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jason Cawthorne
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 9:47:16 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jason Cawthorne
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: Laura Goldin
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Walton, Shamann \(BOS\)
Cc: DorseyStaff \(BOS\); EngardioStaff \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Preston, Dean \(BOS\); Stefani, Catherine \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Breed, Mayor London \(MYR\)
Subject: San Francisco Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:58:21 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee Members:

Undersigned demand a 2023-2024 Budget which reflects the values and goals of our City. It should prioritize the needs of the people who live, work and spend time in our community. It should provide the maximum services to those with the greatest need. Mayor London Breed's proposed budget does the opposite. It slashes and burns the social safety net:

- Housing: Small Sites Acquisition Fund keeps people in affordable homes. Reduces homelessness.
Slashed by 65%.
- Established Food Programs/Food Banks feed the hungry. Reduces food theft and prevents hunger-related illness.
Cut by 33%.
- Building Inspections Code Enforcement assists poor people with substandard housing repairs (e.g., rats, mold). Prevents disease and homelessness.
Cut by $? Potentially entirely eliminated.
- Department of Early Childhood provides low-income children 6 years and younger with education and services. Gives infants a solid start. Prevents crime. Assures racial equity.
Cut 13.5%, $50.6 million.
- San Francisco Ethics Commission assures that politicians like London Breed obey the laws and are not corrupt.
Cut 32% from operating budget; 40% reduction in staff.
Mayor Breed's budget proposes to increase a bloated police budget by nearly $63 million. She also wants an almost $6 million increase to the District Attorney's budget. These increases are a cynical effort to convince us that the failed "War On Drugs" will miraculously save our City. Decades of useless grandstanding tell us you can't arrest and prosecute your way out of a "doom loop." In fact, SF Police Chief William Scott admits the police goal is not to reduce addiction. It's to remove street people from public view.

Acknowledge that a budget which shreds our city's established social safety nets is a formula for increased crime and erosion of public safety. Restore essential services. Make our City healthier and safer!

- Laura Goldin, District 1
- Martha Goldin, Judge Retired, District 1
- Janelle Jolley, District 8
- Mary Leatherman, District 8
- Winnie Porter, District 11

"Wars are poor chisels for carving out peaceful tomorrows." - Martin Luther King, Jr.

 Please consider the environment before printing this email

From: Winnie Joaquina
To: Laura Goldin
Cc: Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Stefani, Catherine \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); DorseyStaff \(BOS\); EngardioStaff \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Breed, Mayor London \(MYR\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Preston, Dean \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Re: San Francisco Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 11:34:41 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Thank you for all your work Laura... I appreciate you

On Tue, Jun 20, 2023 at 10:57 AM Laura Goldin <lgsplace@gmail.com> wrote:

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee Members:

Undersigned demand a 2023-2024 Budget which reflects the values and goals of our City. It should prioritize the needs of the people who live, work and spend time in our community. It should provide the maximum services to those with the greatest need. Mayor London Breed's proposed budget does the opposite. It slashes and burns the social safety net:

- Housing: Small Sites Acquisition Fund keeps people in affordable homes. Reduces homelessness.

Slashed by 65%.

- Established Food Programs/Food Banks feed the hungry. Reduces food theft and prevents hunger-related illness.

Cut by 33%.

- Building Inspections Code Enforcement assists poor people with substandard housing repairs (e.g., rats, mold). Prevents disease and homelessness.

Cut by $? Potentially entirely eliminated.

- Department of Early Childhood provides low-income children 6 years and younger with education and services. Gives infants a solid start. Prevents crime. Assures racial equity.

Cut 13.5%, $50.6 million.

- San Francisco Ethics Commission assures that politicians like London Breed obey the laws and are not corrupt.

Cut 32% from operating budget; 40% reduction in staff.

Mayor Breed's budget proposes to increase a bloated police budget by nearly $63 million. She also wants an almost $6 million increase to the District Attorney's budget. These increases are a cynical effort to convince us that the failed "War On Drugs" will miraculously save our City. Decades of useless grandstanding tell us you can't arrest and prosecute your way out of a "doom loop." In fact, SF Police Chief William Scott admits the police goal is not to reduce addiction. It's to remove street people from public view.

Acknowledge that a budget which shreds our city's established social safety nets is a formula for increased crime and erosion of public safety. Restore essential services. Make our City healthier and safer!

- Laura Goldin, District 1
- Martha Goldin, Judge Retired, District 1
- Janelle Jolley, District 8
- Mary Leatherman, District 8
- Winnie Porter, District 11

"Wars are poor chisels for carving out peaceful tomorrows." - Martin Luther King, Jr.

 Please consider the environment before printing this email

--
Winnie Porter

From: ryan.bach91@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Ryan Bach
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 12:36:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Ryan Bach
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: Evan Kaizer
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); shaman.walton@sfgov.org; Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\)
Cc: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\)
Subject: Powell Funding is Critical. VOTE YES to SAVE San Francisco
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:07:38 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

A YES VOTE ON THE POWELL STREET FUNDING IS A VOTE TO S A V E SAN FRANCISCO!!

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco is currently in horrible shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Thank you for your support.

Evan Kaizer
Sieroty Company / Stratford Hotel Property LLC

From: yehouda.shomron@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Yehouda Shomron
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:07:53 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Yehouda Shomron
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: tjnew@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Thomas Newhall
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:11:16 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Thomas Newhall
San Jose, CA 95138

From: [\[Redacted\]](#)
To: William\_Breit@SFGov.org, Chris\_Corona@SFGov.org, Safal\_Ahalya@SFGov.org, William\_Sherman@SFGov.org, Barbara\_Catlin@SFGov.org
CC: William\_Breit@SFGov.org, Safal\_Ahalya@SFGov.org
Subject: re: Powell Street Pedestrian Support
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 11:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Kind Regards,

Carlos Corona
Store Manager

FENDI
195 Grant Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94108
S: 415.820.2090
C: 415.823.4334
carlos.corona@fendi.com
<https://url.avanan.click/v2/> www.fendi.com

Confidentiality Notice: This electronic mail transmission may contain legally privileged and/or confidential information. It is intended for the named recipient(s) only. If you are not an intended recipient, please do not read this message. Any use, distribution, copying or disclosure by any other person is strictly prohibited. If you have received this transmission in error, please notify the sender by telephone or by reply e-mail and destroy the original transmission and its attachments from your system without reading or saving in any manner. As there can be no certainty that this message will not be modified as a result of transmission via the Internet, FENDI (and its subsidiaries and affiliates) shall not be held responsible if the contents of this message have been modified.

From: sparks.hannah@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Hannah Sparks
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:30:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Hannah Sparks
San Francisco, CA 94112

From: Wes Tyler
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); asha.safai@sfgove.org; Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); marisa@unionsquarealliance.com
Subject: Please approve proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:34:42 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Thank you for your support.

Wes Tyler, CHA
General Manager
Chancellor Hotel on Union Square
"Where the Cable Cars stop at the doorstep"
433 Powell Street
San Francisco, CA 94102
Ph. 415.362.2004 Fax 415.395.9476
www.chancellorhotel.com

From: Mark Purdy
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Powell Street Funding Support
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:42:25 PM
Attachments: image001.png
image002.png
image003.png
image004.png
image005.png
Powell Street Funding Support Letter.msg

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members

In conjunction with my email last week regarding the Powell Street Funding Support Letter (copy attached), I strongly urge support for the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

I understand and recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together, however, downtown provides the majority of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides most jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown fails in its recovery, the City will unquestionably suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and is in bad shape. The district needs your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state for both locals and visitors alike.

Thank you for your attention to this serious request.

Regards

Mark Purdy (He/Him/His)

Senior Vice President, Investment
Grosvenor - Property Americas

D +1 (415) 268-4032
M +1 (415) 500-5476
E mark.purdy@grosvenor.com

grosvenor.com

Important legal notices This message is confidential and may be legally privileged. It is intended solely for the addressee and access, disclosure, copying, distribution or any other use by or to anyone else is prohibited and may be unlawful. If you have received the message in error, please notify us immediately and delete it. Please take time to consider if this email is legitimate. Check with us via other means if there is any doubt. We will not accept liability for malicious software or links in emails. This email has been sent by or behalf of Grosvenor Group Limited registered in England and Wales under Company No. 12656651 at 70 Grosvenor Street, London, W1K 3JP, one of its subsidiaries or another Grosvenor entity. Contact details and privacy notices for Grosvenor entities can be found via: https://url.avanan.click/v2/\_\_\_www.grosvenor.com\_\_\_YXAzOnNmZHQyOmE6bzo4NmNiYTk3YTIzZWZhZDQzYjIxMDAxY2RmOTMxZWY5ZTo2OmMzYjI6ZmU2YmExYmQxMzk5Yzc2NjEzNjZmMzM5NjIzMTAxMTM1ZThhZjM2MDNhY2FmZmEyYzYyMWFkMTgwODNiNmE4Yjp0OIQ. Grosvenor Investment Management Limited, part of the Grosvenor Group and registered in England and Wales under Company No. 2774291 at 70 Grosvenor Street, London, W1K 3JP, is authorised and regulated by the UK Financial Conduct Authority to conduct investment business. Our emails are informational and not a solicitation or offer to buy or sell any securities or related financial instruments.

June 14, 2023

San Francisco Budget and Finance Committee
1 Dr. Carlton B.
Goodlett Place
City Hall, Room 244
San Francisco, CA 94102

Powell Street Funding Support

Dear Members of the Budget and Finance Committee:

I am writing on behalf of Grosvenor, property owner of 180 Post Street, 185 Post Street, 251 Post Street, and 240 Stockton Street, to provide enthusiastic support for the Powell Street funding which has been proposed by Mayor Breed and Board President Peskin as part of the FY 23-4 budget.

Union Square is the gateway to San Francisco for over 10 million visitors per year. It generates over 15% of the City's annual sales tax revenue and is home to 12,000 hotel rooms. Perhaps most importantly, the Union Square district provides thousands of lower- and middle-income jobs, including hotel workers, restaurant workers, shop workers, janitors, and security personnel. Many of these jobs will be at risk if the District fails to thrive in the future.

Powell Street, in turn, is the gateway to Union Square. Every day, 9,000 people exit BART at Powell, with many more coming from Muni light rail and buses. Each day, 6,000 people walk up and down the blocks of Powell between Market Street and Geary. The Powell cable car turnaround, at Market Street, is where most visitors access the cable cars, which consistently rank as the number one visitor attraction in San Francisco.

The three blocks of Powell Street between Market and Geary are now in very poor condition, both in terms of empty storefronts and physical degradation of the street environment. While the blocks in the Union Square district which are home to luxury retail look very nice, these blocks of Powell, traditionally home to more affordable and eating places, are in bad shape. Ground floor vacancy rates along these blocks are at historically high rates.

Mayor Breed and Board President Peskin have proposed $2 million to improve the physical streetscape environment (to be added to $2 million from the SFMTA) as well as $2 million for tenant attraction into empty storefronts along Powell.

The $2 million proposed to incentivize filling these critical retail storefront spaces will help to "sweeten the pot" for prospective tenants who are considering signing a lease in one of these spaces. These funds could be used to:

- Fund targeted tax incentives passed through to new or retained businesses that commit or recommit to these blocks
- Support tenant improvements or façade improvements for key spaces
- Fund increased cleaning and/or security services for these blocks
- Fund enhanced marketing and tenant attraction services for these blocks

The total of $4 million for physical improvements to the Powell Street pedestrian experience would allow the Union Square Alliance to create meaningful improvements to the pedestrian experience on this critical gateway corridor, including:

- Removal of the existing parklets
- Widening of the sidewalks without major disruptive concrete reconstruction
- Resurfacing of the sidewalks
- Inclusion of appropriate lighting, landscape elements, and potentially art and interpretive elements related to the history of the cable cars

I would like to thank the Board again for its attention to the revival of San Francisco's irreplaceable downtown and look forward to your support for these critical budget items.

Yours sincerely,

Mark Purdy
Senior Vice President, Investment
mark.purdy@grosvenor.com

June 15, 2023

RE: Community organizations support funding for SF Public Defender's Office

Dear Members of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors,

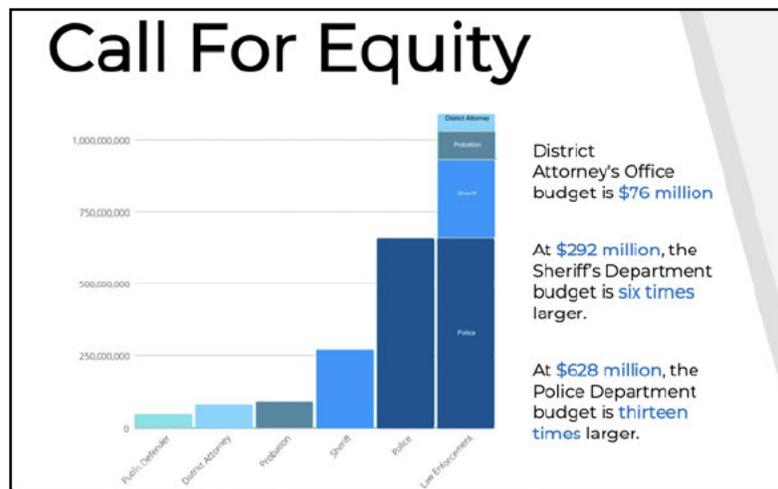

We write to you as community leaders, community-based organizations, and allies serving and advocating for people who have been impacted by the criminal legal system in San Francisco. Black, brown, and LGBT communities continue to be disproportionately stopped, arrested and held in San Francisco county jail, subject to a punishment-based criminal legal system that separates families and causes harm to our poorest communities on a daily basis. We ask that you increase San Francisco's investment and commitment to the San Francisco Public Defender's Office, an agency that is critical to furthering community health, justice, safety.

The Public Defender's clients are largely Black (51%) or people of color (76%), and are often houseless (40% of the jail population), and/or addressing substance use and/or mental illness (over 75% of people in jail have serious mental illness and/or a history of substance use). Many of these system-impacted community members are already in crisis at the point when they are arrested or charged.

When community members become involved with the criminal system, it is critical that they are provided with the best possible legal advocacy, as well as access to support services that enable them to exit the cycle of criminalization. Strong legal advocacy includes confronting the historically racist criminal legal system, and using available tools - such as the California Racial Justice Act - to address racial bias.

In San Francisco, while our Public Defender's office is on the frontlines of addressing racial inequality, homelessness, and mental health needs, it also is systematically under-funded, as is every Public Defender office in the country. While our office is on the frontlines of addressing racial inequality, homelessness, and mental health needs, it also is systematically under-funded compared to law enforcement agencies, as is every Public Defender office in the country. The Public Defender's budget is less than 57% of the San Francisco's District Attorney's Office. The Public Defender's budget is also six times less than the Sheriff's Department, and thirteen times less than the Police Department.

We ask that this year, San Francisco becomes the first city and county in the country to right this wrong, to stand with us and declare that a well-funded Public Defender's office, staffed with passionate and committed attorneys, social workers, and other support staff, is critical to supporting our community members at the margins.

For us to undo decades of racism in the criminal system, while also helping our community members and family members heal and thrive to create a more just and safe community, we need a Public Defender's office that is funded at a level that comes closer to parity with other criminal legal agencies, such as the District Attorney, Police, Probation, and the Sheriff.

Thank you for considering our strong support for the San Francisco Public Defender's Office.

In Community,

A. Philip Randolph Institute San Francisco

ACLU of Northern California

Activ8SF

Asian Americans Advancing Justice - Asian Law Caucus

Asian Prisoner Support Committee

Bay Area Community Resources

Bay Area Gators

Booker T Washington Community Service Center

Californians for Safety and Justice

California Coalition for Women Prisoners

Chinese for Affirmative Action

Coalition on Homelessness

City of Dreams

Council on American-Islamic Relations, SFBA

Dolores Street Community Services

GLIDE

Five Keys Schools and Programs

Handful Players

HomeRise

Inner City Youth

Legal Services for Children

Legal Services for Prisoners with Children

Literacy for Environmental Justice

Marie Harrison Community Foundation, Inc.

Mercy Housing

Open Door Legal

Parents for Public Schools of San Francisco

Project Homeless Connect

Project Rebound, SF State University

Reentry & Violence Prevention Committee, Latino Task Force

Renaissance Parents of Success

Samoan Community Development Center

San Francisco Black Wallstreet

San Francisco Pretrial Diversion Project

San Francisco Taxpayers for Public Safety

Sustainable Futures

3rd Street Youth Center & Clinic

Young Community Developers

Young Women's Freedom Center

UCSF / Citywide

United Playaz

Us 4 Us Bay Area

From: Azuras, Jason \(SHF\)
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: SF Sheriff's Department
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 11:44:11 AM

---

Good morning Sir,

I write to you as a person who absolutely loves the San Francisco of yesterday and I am saddened to see what has come of San Francisco.

I am a Deputy Sheriff and I take great pride and joy in servicing the citizens of San Francisco and it's community stakeholders. And I believe I can say that for the other 600 or so members that show up everyday and try their best to do our duties. With that said, I was suppose to write this email yesterday but my 16 hour shift got consumed with my daywatch team was understaffed by 4 below our minimums of what is considered safe for our fellow Deputies, civilian staff and those involved with the justice system. On the same shift a custody assaulted 3 of our deputies. They had to be taken to the hospital. So by the end of daywatch we were down 7 deputies. Our Monday through Friday minimum is 13. On a day to day basis I am witnessing my fellow deputies being stretched out to do two and three different posts. I am sure I don't have to tell you that is a recipe for disaster and HUGE liabilities. If you haven't already I would encourage a personal tour of the facility and talk with staff and hear our stories. Any ear that will listen is always welcomed. I must head back in now. Today we are down 8. Leaving only 5 deputies to provide safety and services to the civilian staff and individuals currently involved with the justice system.

Deputy Azuras #2402
County Jail 1
Intake and release center.

Get Outlook for iOS

From: PATRICK SIU
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: My Life As A Deputy Sheriff
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 2:08:49 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Mr. Brent Jalipa,

My name is Patrick and I've been with the San Francisco Sheriff Department, as a Deputy Sheriff for 22 years now. The Department has been great to me during my career and I have no complaints until the last 10 years with the current staffing levels.

Like all city departments, there's always going to be job vacancies that aren't filled but will be filled in the future when employees start to retire. During the last 2-3 years, I've seen a lot of my co-workers retire or leave but were never replaced. With our job, like many First Responders, it takes approximately 1 year to fill that vacancy; and that's not including the application process.

Like I mentioned, I've been with the Department for 22 years and eligible to retire at any time. My job has dramatically change to include dealing with the mentally unstable that come into custody more violently. Some even struggle violently when being released back into the community because they don't realize they're being released.

The ones that do continue to remain in custody, we are forced to deal with on a daily bases. Just providing them with required basic needs such as serving the meals, taking them out for hygienic tasks and exercising recreation; have caused Deputized staff to become injured. Yes, they constantly fight with staff and some have even restored to throwing urine and feces at Deputies. Some striking them in the eyes and mouth as intended by the perpetrator.

With the short staffing, all deputies are required to do not just their own assignment or two but must juggle 3 or 4 assignments. And that's when there's staffing to fill those job slots. Most leave after working a 16 hour shift, leaving the staff to basically "fend" for themselves. Many times, only 1 deputy is forced to watch over 80 to 90 custodies until additional staff arrives, which may take up to 2 hours. Many are taken away from the their observation podium because civilian staffs, like medical and program, fear for their safety while performing their duties.

Every year, many citizens criticize the yearly earnings of the Deputies but don't realize how much time we are "required" to spend at work. Some are forced to work 3 additional eight hour shifts, until our Sheriff Miyamoto temporarily downshifted to 2 shifts. That move, while alleviate very burnt out workers, also created safety concerns to staffs and justice involved people. When I first started, Deputies that had more than 15 years weren't required to work if they chose not to work but now it's necessary to have a safe environment for all people involved. I've even joked that I should list this as my home address because it seem like I spend more time here than my real residence.

Due to the short staffing levels, important medical appointments are often missed or rescheduled because of exhaustion or work schedule conflicts. I had multiple notices from my doctor that threatened to drop me because of missed appointments. Family functions were often held with me because I was working on weekends. Children functions were often held without me because it didn't happen to fall on my off day.

I'm not saying anything bad about the San Francisco Sheriff Department because it's been great to me and my family. The Sheriff and Undersheriff have done the best they could with the current staffing level but the politicians need to stop playing political games with defunding the Department. With cuts to hiring and staff, it's going to become a liability to the city. Like any business, you need to use funds to attract quality employees. Past practice was to hire en masses but it's prove to be a liability with incidents resulting in lawsuits

The reason I'm writing to you is because the Department's been good to me and I don't want it to see it become disrepair. If funding is cut and staffing levels don't increase, I am eligible to retire at any time and will add onto the burden.

Sincerely,

Sent from my iPhone

Sent from my iPhone

From: Juan
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Sheriff's budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 3:06:17 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Begin forwarded message:

From: Juan Garrido <j.garrido@sbcglobal.net>
Date: June 16, 2023 at 2:02:40 PM PDT
To: Jalipabrent.jalipa@sfgov.org
Cc: President Ken Lomba <president@sanfranciscodsa.com>
Subject: Fw: Failure Notice

----- Forwarded Message -----

From: "mailer-daemon@yahoo.com" <mailer-daemon@yahoo.com>
To: "j.garrido@sbcglobal.net" <j.garrido@sbcglobal.net>
Sent: Friday, June 16, 2023 at 02:00:54 PM PDT
Subject: Failure Notice

Sorry, we were unable to deliver your message to the following address.

<Jalipabrent.jalipa@sfgov.org>:

550: 5.4.1 Recipient address rejected: Access denied. AS(201806281)
[DM3GCC02FT006.eop-gcc02.prod.protection.outlook.com 2023-06-16T21:00:51.277Z
08DB6E7EF1B880F7]

----- Forwarded message -----

Good Afternoon,

Today I am Contacting you to show support for Sheriff Paul Miyamoto and the members of the Sheriff Office during this budget meeting. I would encourage the Board of supervisors to fully support and fully Fund the Sheriff office for the up coming fiscal year. The Sheriff's office plays multiple roles in the community from enforcement to housing, court service, programs and rehabilitation to transporting and monitoring people that have become incarcerated. The Sheriff's office is in Dire need of the budget committee to help retaining our Current staffing while we continually try to hire to meet our staffing levels. Over 100 Deputies are in the process of leaving this year and and vast amount of our dept is retirement eligible. To help retain veteran staffing the Mayor's office and the Board of Supervisors awarded d a retention incentive to the Police dept. and Fire Dept. this incentive should also be budgeted and awarded to the Sheriff's office as well so that the Sheriff can maintain current staffing levels and increase filling the current job openings. I also want to take the time to acknowledge the Deputies of the sheriff office for the hard work they do every day for the Community.

Thankyou,

J.Garrido

From: Peter Roos
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Cc: president@sanfranciscodsa.com
Subject: SF Sherriff Department Funding
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 7:52:14 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Please fund the SF Sherriff Department.

I live in Oakland and work in San Francisco. San Francisco is turning into a ghost town, and the lack of law enforcement is a major contributor. Big retailers are moving out of the city. Cinema theaters are closing down. Small retailers are closing business. The only people left in SF are homeless drug addicts, shooting up in the streets and everywhere, and criminals looting homes and businesses.

Peter

From: carolinsturtevant@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Carolyn Sturtevant
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:54:49 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Carolin Sturtevant
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: Dana Coe
To: Jalipa Brent \(BOS\)
Cc: marisa@unionsquarealliance.com
Subject: Powell Street Funding Support
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 2:15:17 PM
Attachments: image012.png
image013.png
Importance: High

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Thank you for your support.

Marisa Rodriguez
Chief Executive Officer
415-781-7880
marisa@unionsquarealliance.com

291 Geary Street, Suite 200
San Francisco, CA 94102

www.visitunionsquaresf.com
Member Services 415-781-4456

The Union Square Business Improvement District is now the Union Square Alliance.
Please make note of our new name and email address.

From: Papadakis, Maxine
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary
Cc: Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Support for Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 2:15:37 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee Members:

I strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Sincerely,
Maxine Papadakis, homeowner
181 O'Farrell St, #306
San Francisco, CA 94102

Maxine A. Papadakis, MD

CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE: This e-mail message, including any attachments, is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) and may contain confidential, proprietary, and/or privileged information protected by law. If you are not the intended recipient, you may not use, copy, or distribute this e-mail message or its attachments. If you believe you have received this e-mail message in error, please contact the sender by reply e-mail and destroy all copies of the original message.

From: Jill Plemons
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Cc: marisa@unionsquarealliance.com
Subject: Powell Street Funding Support - Beacon Grand (formerly Sir Francis Drake Hotel)
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 2:42:04 PM
Attachments: image001.png

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts. As a long-time, prominent hotel along this corridor it is imperative to our future guests and the City that this issue be prioritized.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Jill

Jill Plemons (She/Her)
Director of Sales & Marketing

BEACON GRAND, A UNION SQUARE HOTEL
450 POWELL ST | SAN FRANCISCO, CA 94102
(415) 395-8580 DIRECT

BEACONGRAND.COM

From: caitlin.sachdev@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Caitlin Sachdev
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 2:44:47 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Caitlin Sachdev
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: minge44@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Ming Chow
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 2:52:56 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Ming Chow
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: mmsaladbar.lukens@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Maria Salazar Lukens
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:44:15 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Maria Salazar Lukens
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: Terik16@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Teri Tollenaere
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:49:51 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Teri Tollenaere
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: rebootica@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rebecca Roman
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:55:49 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Roman
Alameda, CA 94501

From: cheryl@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Cheryl Traverse
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:33:57 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Cheryl Traverse
San Francisco, CA 94131

From: sfwaterbug@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Polly Shaw
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:50:25 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Polly Shaw
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: donnalock2001@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Donna Lock
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:17:40 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Donna Lock
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: sandysu1130@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sandy Su
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:43:33 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sandy Su
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: cloudsrest789@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of KAREN WONG
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:15:44 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
KAREN WONG
San Francisco, CA 94108

From: Todd Christman
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary
Cc: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\)
Subject: Urgent Matter
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:30:34 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Sincerely,

Todd Christman
Mitchell Family Trust
111 Powell Street

From: cloudsrest789@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of KAREN WONG
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:41:53 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
KAREN WONG
San Francisco, CA 94108

From: Di Gao
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:08:33 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不現實的。我要求的是明顯減少正在侵蝕我們城市的露天毒品銷售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Di Gao
tddidi@gmail.com
456 Lisbon st
San Francisco , California 94112

From: Clark, Clif
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Please Support Powell Street Funding Request /The Westin St. Francis on Union Square
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:56:00 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Clifton Clark

Area General Manager

THE WESTIN ST. FRANCIS SAN FRANCISCO ON UNION SQUARE

335 Powell Street

San Francisco, CA 94102

United States

www.westinfrancis.com

P +1 415 774 0101 E clif.clark@westin.com

Marriott Bonvoy | Facebook | Instagram | Hotel Video | Virtual Tour

From: Sellami, Christina
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Please Support Powell Street Funding Request /The Westin St. Francis on Union Square
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:11:33 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Christina Sellami

Director of Human Resources

THE WESTIN ST. FRANCIS SAN FRANCISCO ON UNION SQUARE

335 Powell Street
San Francisco, CA 94102
United States

www.westinfrancisco.com

T +1 415 774 0291 E christina.sellami@westin.com

Marriott Bonvoy | Facebook | Instagram | Hotel Video | Virtual Tour

From: Ravi Chakrapani
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Please Support Powell Street Funding Request /The Westin St. Francis on Union Square
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:36:51 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Chakrapani Ravi

Director of Event Operations

THE WESTIN ST. FRANCIS SAN FRANCISCO ON UNION SQUARE

335 Powell Street
San Francisco, CA 94102
United States

www.westinstfrancis.com

T +1 415 774 0231 F +1 415 403 6887 M +1 415 725 1435 E Chakrapani.Ravi@westin.com

Marriott Bonvoy | Facebook | Instagram | Hotel Video | Virtual Tour

From: jsb422@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Josh Brown
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 9:16:42 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Josh Brown
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: isabellagomide@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Isabella Gomide
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:47:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Isabella Gomide
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: nickel\_virtue.0i@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Zachary Kerns
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:59:57 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Zachary Kerns
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: edgargee@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Edgar Gee
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 11:22:45 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Edgar Gee
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: simiadebajo@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Simileoluwa Adebajo
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:47:52 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Simileoluwa Adebajo
Los Angeles, CA 90017

From: istvan.szanda@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Istvan Szanda
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:45:59 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Istvan Szanda
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: Maya Zuckerman
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: File #230644: Please fund the Climate Equity Hub; we need it!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:58:28 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Clerk Brent Jalipa,

Please support the add-back of the extremely reasonable $1 million that SF Environment Department (SFE) has submitted in its recently-revised budget request. While the Mayor included part of SFE's original request in her budget proposal, she neglected to fund the Climate Equity Hub's ability finally to become reality as a community resource crucial to equitable decarbonization of existing homes.

We need the Climate Equity Hub to help us - renters, homeowners, landlords, chefs, business owners, workers, trainees, contractors, and others - to access rebates, incentives, education, jobs: opportunities for all San Franciscans to benefit from the elimination of health-harming, climate-destroying natural gas from our buildings.

These services are especially critical since the Bay Area Air Quality Management District's new rules will require the replacement of end-of-life gas-powered water heaters and furnaces with electric appliances beginning in 2027 and 2029, respectively. Most people are currently unaware of these regulations and will need help to comply.

SF Environment's $1 million request breaks down as follows:

- $750,000 to get the Climate Equity Hub up and running
- $100,000 for technical consultants to help investigate and resolve issues with implementation of building decarbonization
- $150,000 in grants for community-based organizations to ensure equitable implementation of the CAP

Please, honor this necessary and reasonable add-back request. Thank you.

Maya Zuckerman
mayaeco@gmail.com
2501 harrison st. STE 3
San Francisco, California 94110

From: susan.criswell@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Susan Criswell
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:52:45 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Susan Criswell
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: bets12979@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Betsy Rew
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:56:06 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Betsy Rew
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: rgulabi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Gulabi Rajasekar
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:22:57 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Gulabi Rajasekar
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: herd\_queen@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Anna-Marie vargas
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:26:10 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Anna-Marie vargas
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: aquilici97@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Antonio Quilici
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:35:46 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Antonio Quilici
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: kielygomes@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Karen Schwartz
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:40:37 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Karen Schwartz
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: Pamela Mendelsohn
To: Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\)
Cc: marisa@unionsquarealliance.com; Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\)
Subject: Revitalization of Downtown San Francisco
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:51:10 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Pamela Mendelsohn

Get Outlook for iOS

From: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
To: BOS-Supervisors; BOS-Legislative Aides
Cc: Calvillo, Angela \(BOS\); Somera, Alisa \(BOS\); Ng, Wilson \(BOS\); De Asis, Edward \(BOS\); Mchugh, Eileen \(BOS\); BOS Legislation, \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: 231 Letters regarding Public Safety, File No. 230644
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:05:53 AM
Attachments: 231 Letters regarding File No. 230644.pdf

---

Hello,

Please see attached for 231 letters regarding funding for public safety investments, File No. 230644.

File No. 230644 - Budget and Appropriation Ordinance for Departments - FYs 2023-2024 and 2024-2025

Sincerely,

Joe Adkins
Office of the Clerk of the Board
San Francisco Board of Supervisors
1 Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett Place, Room 244
San Francisco, CA 94102
Phone: (415) 554-5184 | Fax: (415) 554-5163
board.of.supervisors@sfgov.org | www.sfbos.org

From: Marshall Terpstra
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:50:15 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Marshall Terpstra
Email                              mjterps@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Adam Hall
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:53:00 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Adam Hall

Email                             ahall6779@gmail.com

I live in District             District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Carla Schlemminger
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:30:27 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Carla Schlemminger

Email                              carlas@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: David Nolley
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:07:29 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      David Nolley
Email                              danolley@aol.com
I live in District              District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Peter Kocks
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:59:20 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Peter Kocks
Email pete.kocks@gmail.com
I live in District District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Alex Hertz
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:50:07 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Alex Hertz
Email                              ahertz0508@comcast.net
I live in District              District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: kaaren alvarado
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:09:00 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      kaaren alvarado
Email                              kaaren25@att.net
I live in District              District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Victoria Barret
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:06:36 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Victoria Barret
Email                              vbarret@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Roberta Economidis
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 12:16:52 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Roberta Economidis
Email                              reconomidis@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Frederick Bullock
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:52:51 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Frederick Bullock
Email                              fred.bullock@outlook.com
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

Frederick Bullock

---

From: Gianmatteo Costanza
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:22:45 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Gianmatteo Costanza
Email                              gianmatteo.costanza@gmail.com
I live in District              District 9

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Alan Burradell
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:11:22 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Alan Burradell
Email                         alanburradell@gmail.com
I live in District             District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                     Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Giovanni Torre
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 7:09:41 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Giovanni Torre

Email                              gtorre@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mary Benjamin
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:58:17 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mary Benjamin
Email                              mary.hall.benjamin@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Austin Locke
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:22:57 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Austin Locke

Email                             austinlocke@gmail.com

I live in District             District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Clara Abecassis
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:17:25 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Clara Abecassis

Email                              abecassis@gmail.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Michael Torres
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:20:53 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Michael Torres
Email mtorres253@gmail.com
I live in District District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets and protect our residents and businesses from the rampant crime we are currently experiencing. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets!

I personally am most concerned with the alarming increase in brazen robberies, including mail theft. This is affecting our quality of life, and it is resulting in businesses leaving the City. I love the City but we need way more attention to this problem than the City seems to be providing at the moment. We all want to recover and we want to be positive, but without this investment in public safety and protection of personal property, we will not recover, and you will be responsible.

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets and make our city safer from the rampant, organized property crime.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Robin McMillan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:11:48 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Robin McMillan
Email                              rkmcmillan@viselect.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Joseph Newell
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:55:22 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Joseph Newell

Email                              joseph.f.newell@gmail.com

I live in District              District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Joseph Newell
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:55:22 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Joseph Newell
Email                             joseph.f.newell@gmail.com
I live in District             District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Susan Fisch
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:45:27 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Susan Fisch
Email                              sfisch116@comcast.net
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Julie Zberg
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:44:04 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Julie Zberg
Email                             jzberg@comcast.net
I live in District             District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Shala Ball
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:55:29 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Shala Ball

Email                              shalaball@gmail.com

I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Shala Ball
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:55:27 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Shala Ball
Email                              shalaball@gmail.com
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Russell Kellites
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:49:00 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Russell Kellites
Email                              rkellites@gmail.com
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Romelia Scott
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 2:13:20 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Romelia Scott
Email                              romyscott@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 11

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Thomas Tobiason
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:06:08 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Thomas Tobiason
Email                              tommyt514@gmail.com
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Leslie Koelsch
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 12:43:35 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Leslie Koelsch

Email                              koelscvh1886@comcast.net

I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Blair Moser
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 12:00:24 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Blair Moser

Email                              blair.moser@sbcglobal.net

I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

As an 80-year old San Francisco voter, I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Belle B
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); Breed, Mayor London \(MYR\)
Subject: reject the mayor"s proposed budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 11:52:18 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors and Mayor Breed,

I live in district 1 and own and operate a store in district 7. I am appalled that the Mayor is trying to cut funding from the essential services and programs that keep people housed, fed, educated, cared for, the list goes on. $1 billion for police while cutting $50 million from the department of early childhood??? $1 billion for the police while cutting 33% of funding from food programs? SHAME on the Mayor for pretending to care for Black and Brown communities when they are most harmed by her police force and most systemically pushed into needing the programs that she refuses to fund.

The mayor's proposed budget will do nothing but increase inequality. I urge you, the Board of Supervisors, and you, the mayor, to FUND FUND FUND social services, PLEASE DO NOT CUT funding from these programs.

Every day, year after year, I drive to work and see the same heroic folks fighting to survive on our streets. Please tangibly help instead of continuing to harm them through your warped and violent over-funding of the police -- get them the services that any caring government should provide.

Thank you,

Belle Bueti

From: Karen Schwartz
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 11:51:16 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Karen Schwartz

Email                              kielygomes@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Justin Hughes
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 8:42:02 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Justin Hughes
Email                             jjh49@yahoo.com
I live in District             District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Erika Kim
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:18:59 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Erika Kim
Email                              e_kimch@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Keiko Golden
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:27:46 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Keiko Golden

Email                              keikogolden@hotmail.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Braden Edwards
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:44:23 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Braden Edwards

Email                              BRADENEDWARDS@GMAIL.COM

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Carmen Woo
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:34:21 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Carmen Woo
Email                              carmenwoo68@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Forrest Liu
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:00:41 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Forrest Liu

Email                              forrest.liu@gmail.com

I live in District              District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Tom McAteer
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 7:52:43 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Tom McAteer
Email                              tom@montres.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Sem Lederman
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 7:52:00 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Sem Lederman
Email                              llederman@hotmail.com
I live in District              District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Scott Evans
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 7:35:46 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Scott Evans
Email                              brianscott2780@gmail.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Yedi Wong
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 6:51:29 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Yedi Wong
Email                              wongye@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Sona Sondhi
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 6:14:40 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Sona Sondhi

Email                              sonya@sondhi.ca

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                              Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: CALLUM HUTCHINS
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 5:23:35 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      CALLUM HUTCHINS
Email                              callum@callumhutchins.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mary Taugher
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 4:45:08 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Mary Taugher
Email marytaugher@sbcglobal.net
I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Carmel Passanisi
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 4:33:24 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Carmel Passanisi

Email carmel2710@comcast.net

I live in District District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Teresa Shaw
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 3:57:03 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Teresa Shaw
Email                              tawny.sapient0c@icloud.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Bronwyn Brunner
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 3:35:23 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Bronwyn Brunner

Email                              bronwynbrunner@gmail.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Bronwyn Brunner
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 3:35:20 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Bronwyn Brunner
Email                              bronwynbrunner@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Vivien MacDonald
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 3:30:03 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Vivien MacDonald
Email bebemacd@aol.com
I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Frank Dal Santo
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 3:25:10 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Frank Dal Santo

Email                              08_owl.orrery@icloud.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Ashley Wessinger
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 3:11:17 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Ashley Wessinger
Email                             ashleywessinger@mac.com
I live in District             District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Eric Roddie
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 2:54:17 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Eric Roddie
Email                              ericdotroddie@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Maribeth Spratt
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 2:33:21 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Maribeth Spratt
Email                              maribeth94122@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Tris Thomson
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 2:24:35 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Tris Thomson
Email                              tris.thomson@comcast.net
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Karina Velasquez
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 1:49:15 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Karina Velasquez
Email                              karinawinder@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mark Varney
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 1:35:01 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mark Varney

Email                              markvarney@hotmail.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Jack Enright
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 1:11:06 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Jack Enright
Email                              enrightengineer@aol.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

Jack Enright

---

From: Alexander McNees
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 12:31:57 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Alexander McNees

Email                              amcnees@hotmail.com

I live in District              District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Michael Barbe
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 12:28:20 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Michael Barbe
Email                              michael.barbe@outlook.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Michael Kloepfer
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 11:53:05 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Michael Kloepfer
Email                              mikekloepfer1@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Ralph Harms
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 11:48:05 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Ralph Harms

Email ralphharms@gmail.com

I live in District District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

IN ADDITION, MORE SHOULD BE SPENT ON CRIMINAL ENFORCEMENT, DRUG REHABILITATION, AND CHANGING THE LAWS TO ELIMINATE RETAIL THEFT AND ENCAMPMENTS ON OUR CITY STREETS. WE'RE PAYING HIGHER TAXES THAN MANY OTHER LARGE CITY, AND WE HAVE RIGHTS OF SAFE ENJOYMENT OF OUR SURROUNDINGS ALSO!

Thank you.

Ralph Harms

---

From: Pat Stanton
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 11:36:10 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Pat Stanton
Email pstanton1224@gmail.com
I live in District District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Shirley Fogarino
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 11:20:26 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Shirley Fogarino

Email                              scoopfoggy@prodigy.net

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Shirley Fogarino
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 11:20:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Shirley Fogarino

Email                              scoopfoggy@prodigy.net

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Lyndy Stewart
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 11:16:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Lyndy Stewart
Email lyndysf@aol.com
I live in District District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Elaine Leung
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 11:06:17 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Elaine Leung

Email sfnewshound@aol.com

I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Carla Mays
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 11:04:19 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Carla Mays
Email carla@smartcohort.org
I live in District District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: David Crane
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:59:27 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      David Crane
Email                              davidc@governforcalifornia.org
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Laura Higbie
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:47:46 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Laura Higbie

Email                              lhigbie@hotmail.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Alex Varon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:35:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Alex Varon
Email                              aevaron@gmail.com
I live in District              District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Alex Varon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:35:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Alex Varon
Email                             aevaron@gmail.com
I live in District             District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Lilly Varon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:35:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Lilly Varon
Email                              lillyvaron@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Lilly Varon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:35:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Lilly Varon
Email                              lillyvaron@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Sol Varon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:35:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Sol Varon
Email                              svaron@msn.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Sarah Varon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:30:20 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Sarah Varon
Email                              christine.varon@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Christine Varon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:29:26 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Christine Varon
Email                              covaron@icloud.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Jessica MacGregor
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:20:28 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Jessica MacGregor
Email                              macgregor.jessicabeth@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Claire Bollman
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:15:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Claire Bollman
Email                              clairebollman@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Marianne Oest
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:10:27 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Marianne Oest
Email                              marianne_oest@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: david bancroft
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:10:17 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      david bancroft

Email                              sfdavidbancroft@gmail.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Tom Flint
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:01:54 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Tom Flint
Email                              thomasflint1@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Anna Ewins
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:55:20 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Anna Ewins
Email                             aewin@pacbell.net
I live in District             District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Monica DuClaud
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:43:17 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Monica DuClaud

Email                              duclaud@comcast.net

I live in District              District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: RICHARD MANSO
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:39:05 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent RICHARD MANSO

Email rmanso2016@gmail.com

I live in District District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

Our City needs dedicated efforts to stop the decaying trends. I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Scott Gordon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:30:19 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Scott Gordon
Email                              1scottst@gmail.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

IMPORTANT ISSUE:

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Paul Ellison
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:20:32 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Paul Ellison
Email                              ellisonpaulm@gmail.com
I live in District              District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

*Every* day I see people openly shooting up drugs on my street. It's not safe to go out after dark. San Francisco should NOT be like this!

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

Paul Ellison

---

From: Jean Kelly
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:20:30 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Jean Kelly
Email                              jmksf3000@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Michael Bobroff
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:20:29 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Michael Bobroff
Email                              bobroff1@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: max\_young
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen\_Hillary; Safai\_Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton\_Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:20:26 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      max young
Email                              maxyoung@icloud.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: GARRETT HOFFMAN
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:20:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      GARRETT HOFFMAN

Email                              garrett.z.hoffman@gmail.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Usha and John Burns
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:20:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Usha and John Burns
Email                              Johnmburns48@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: John O'Connor
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:20:14 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      John O'Connor
Email                              joc242@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Shane takeshita
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:15:18 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Shane takeshita

Email                              shaneakira07@gmail.com

I live in District              District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets. Ok

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Demian Fitzgerald
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:10:27 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Demian Fitzgerald
Email                              demian1a@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Sandy Mori
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:10:27 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Sandy Mori

Email                              sandymori128@gmail.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Charles Bush
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:00:34 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Charles Bush

Email                              cbush8@comcast.net

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Amanda Michael
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:00:30 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Amanda Michael

Email                              mssamanda1@gmail.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Andrew Nadell
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:00:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Andrew Nadell

Email                              caius@caius.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Gianna Assereto
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 9:00:18 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Gianna Assereto
Email                              gmassereto@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Rebecca Saroyan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:35 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Rebecca Saroyan
Email                              rebecca.saroyan@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Nathan Hills
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:33 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Nathan Hills

Email                              nathanhills@mac.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: David Lehr
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:26 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      David Lehr
Email                              lehr.david@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mickey Dantine
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mickey Dantine
Email                              mickdantine@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Rebecca Saroyan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Rebecca Saroyan
Email                              rebecca.saroyan@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Dana Dantine
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Dana Dantine
Email                         dwdantine@gmail.com
I live in District             District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                     Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: David Lehr
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:22 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      David Lehr

Email                              lehr.david@gmail.com

I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mickey Dantine
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mickey Dantine
Email                              mickdantine@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Dana Dantine
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Dana Dantine
Email                              dwdantine@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Nathan Hills
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:55:20 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Nathan Hills
Email nathanhills@mac.com
I live in District District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Philip Healy
To: Board of Supervisors (BOS); PrestonStaff (BOS); ChanStaff (BOS); Mandelman, Rafael (BOS); Peskin, Aaron (BOS); MelgarStaff (BOS); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha (BOS); Walton Shamann (BOS)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:50:32 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Philip Healy
Email lfchere@yahoo.com
I live in District District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Nicole Cramer
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:50:22 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Nicole Cramer
Email                              diavolezz@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Priscilla Dwyer
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:50:20 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Priscilla Dwyer

Email jandpdwyer@earthlink.net

I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Alan Silverman
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:44:42 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Alan Silverman
Email                             alansilverman185@comcast.net
I live in District             District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: David Mahoney
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:42:43 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      David Mahoney
Email                              roodad@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Margaret Lee
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 7:46:53 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Margaret Lee
Email leem3@sfusd.edu
I live in District District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Linda R Miller
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 1:54:40 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Linda R Miller

Email                              millerlr@mac.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Peter Lee
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 12:16:26 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Peter Lee
Email peterboothlee@hotmail.com
I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Karen Schwartz
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:39:53 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Karen Schwartz

Email                              kielygomes@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Judith Goldstein
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:05:21 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Judith Goldstein
Email                             judgold22@yahoo.com
I live in District             District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Ronald Mungai
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:57:48 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Ronald Mungai
Email                              limo4usf@gmail.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Lynne Schaadt
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:25:18 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Lynne Schaadt
Email                              lynnneschaadt@hotmail.com
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Michael H. Samson
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:33:17 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Michael H. Samson
Email                              michaelhsamson@comcast.net
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

We've lived in San Francisco for more than sixty years and the city has never been worse than it is now. Crime and grime and businesses closing down everywhere.

My wife and I are over eighty and we have to fear for our lives in many parts of this city because there are no consequences for breaking the law.

Thank you.

---

From: Chris Fern
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:35:18 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Chris Fern
Email                              operachris@aol.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Lola Lee
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:33:57 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Lola Lee

Email                              lolalee008@gmail.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                              Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Arthur Hubbard
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 6:27:55 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Arthur Hubbard

Email     amhsf@att.net

I live in District     District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:     Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Erika Kim
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 5:30:23 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Erika Kim
Email                              e_kimch@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.
Erika

---

From: Stacie Johnson
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 5:20:00 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Stacie Johnson
Email                              stacielyn_99@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Kate English
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 5:15:03 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Kate English

Email                              kenglish1775@comcast.net

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Grace Huey
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 4:13:42 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Grace Huey
Email                              hueygt@aol.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Jason Jungreis
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); Breed, Mayor London \(MYR\)
Subject: Cut all homeless programs and add money to the police and jail budget. Just like cities without a homeless drug-abusing criminal population
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 4:06:25 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Mayor and Supervisors,

Please cut all homeless programming money from the budget, saving a billion dollars. Add a few tens of millions of police and jail. In this way, we will solve the San Francisco homeless problem.

Here are the three reasons why you should do this:

1. You must only take care of San Franciscans.

Note that I did not say above that we would solve the homeless problem that exists in the state, in the country, or in the world. That is a problem, to be sure. But it is not our problem. Because those who are not San Franciscans should be taken care of by the town they are from. You have a duty squarely and only to San Franciscans. Our concern is for San Franciscans, and there are exceedingly few homeless San Franciscans. As this article finally provides proof -- because arrests require determination of actual residency (and not what someone claims), virtually everyone recently arrested (finally!) for open drug abuse are NOT FROM SAN FRANCISCO: <https://www.kron4.com/news/focus-on-fentanyl/only-3-of-45-people-arrested-in-sf-drug-crackdown-from-city-sfpd/>. Those who are truly San Franciscans are so few that private charities can care for them. We are running a terrible budget deficit. We keep throwing more and more and more and more and more money at the problem. And it doesn't get better. That's because you can't help someone more than that person wants to be helped, and you can't literally play nursemaid to those who can't function in society, and you can't afford to try. It is a continually failed experiment, and you yourselves must be insane if you think more of the same failed policies will suddenly work. Just stop.

2. Your policies only attract homeless drug-abusing criminals.

I am drawing a straight line between the homeless and drug abusers and criminals. Because, as every single San Franciscan with any experience knows (I have been a San Francisco resident for 40 years, and this is certainly my experience), there is a class of failed adults in the world. Those who, whether due to willful antisocial intent, inability to fight addiction, mental instability, pure criminal urge, or sloth, will not work, will do drugs, will commit crime, and will accept or embrace living on the street. For those with mental illness, they should be federally institutionalized. For those who are criminals, there must be consequences for their actions, and that consequence should be so fearsome as to dissuade them from continuing to do crime. For those who simply will not work, let nature run its course.

3. We don't have the money.

We don't have the money, and that is a simple truth. Acknowledge the truth. And in so doing, you will be breaking the cycle of homelessness. Which is good for everyone. Let those who are not from San Francisco go home. We have real work to do in this City. Focus on that.

Thanks.

Jason Jungreis
San Francisco

From: Judith Berkowitz
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 3:53:04 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Judith Berkowitz

Email                              sfjberk@mac.com

I live in District              District 9

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Carol Yenne
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 3:43:32 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Carol Yenne
Email                              cyenne51@gmail.com
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Dean Preston

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Vaughn McGuire
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 3:27:12 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Vaughn McGuire
Email                              brokervaughn@msn.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Susan Pryce
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:43:40 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Susan Pryce
Email                              piedmont062@gmail.com
I live in District              District 6

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Thomas Henderson
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:39:25 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Thomas Henderson
Email                              t.stephen.henderson@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Charles Lichtman
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:20:22 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Charles Lichtman
Email                              sfphoneguy@gmail.com
I live in District              District 8

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Duncan Kennedy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:13:49 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Duncan Kennedy
Email                              dunkennedy@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Brian Bonham
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:07:00 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Brian Bonham
Email                              mayumikamon@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Christina Tucker
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 1:15:51 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Christina Tucker
Email                              ctucker.0306@gmail.com
I live in District              District 5

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Joe A. Kunzler
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Your city appears unsafe
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 12:41:27 PM
Attachments: image.png

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

I am writing to advise the Honourable Supervisors of the latest Daily Mail coverage of your city. This is not a good look.

You need to be cracking down on the drugs. Especially as without a safe downtown, folks won't come back to SF. Not even to cheer on Supervisor Stefani... especially when the BART trains are like THIS according to one of the BART watchdogs on Twitter:

Thank you;

Joe Kunzler

=====

EXCLUSIVE: Abandoned stores, streets overtaken by the homeless and drug-addled, theft so rampant that CANDY is locked away: Welcome to

San Francisco's ghost town downtown

- San Francisco tourism is down by 16% from pre-pandemic levels, workers have abandoned their offices to work from home and stores are empty
- In their place, some 7,000 homeless have descended on downtown areas and tourist traps
- Now hotels and stores are closing and the whole future of the Bay City – one of the most popular destinations in the United States – is under a cloud

By RUTH STYLES IN SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, FOR DAILYMAIL.COM and LEWIS PENNOCK FOR DAILYMAIL.COM

PUBLISHED: 07:35 EDT, 18 June 2023 | UPDATED: 10:11 EDT, 18 June 2023

e-mail 79
shares

165

e-mail

165

View comments

A photo plastered on the empty windows shows it as it used to be: a colorful branch of Gap surrounded by crowds of cheerful tourists and not a drug addict or scrap of litter in sight.

Today, San Francisco's once bustling Union Square and downtown area is a shadow of its former self: rows of empty stores, sparse crowds even on peak weekend shopping days and nearby hotels – including a huge Hilton - unable to cover their mortgage payments.

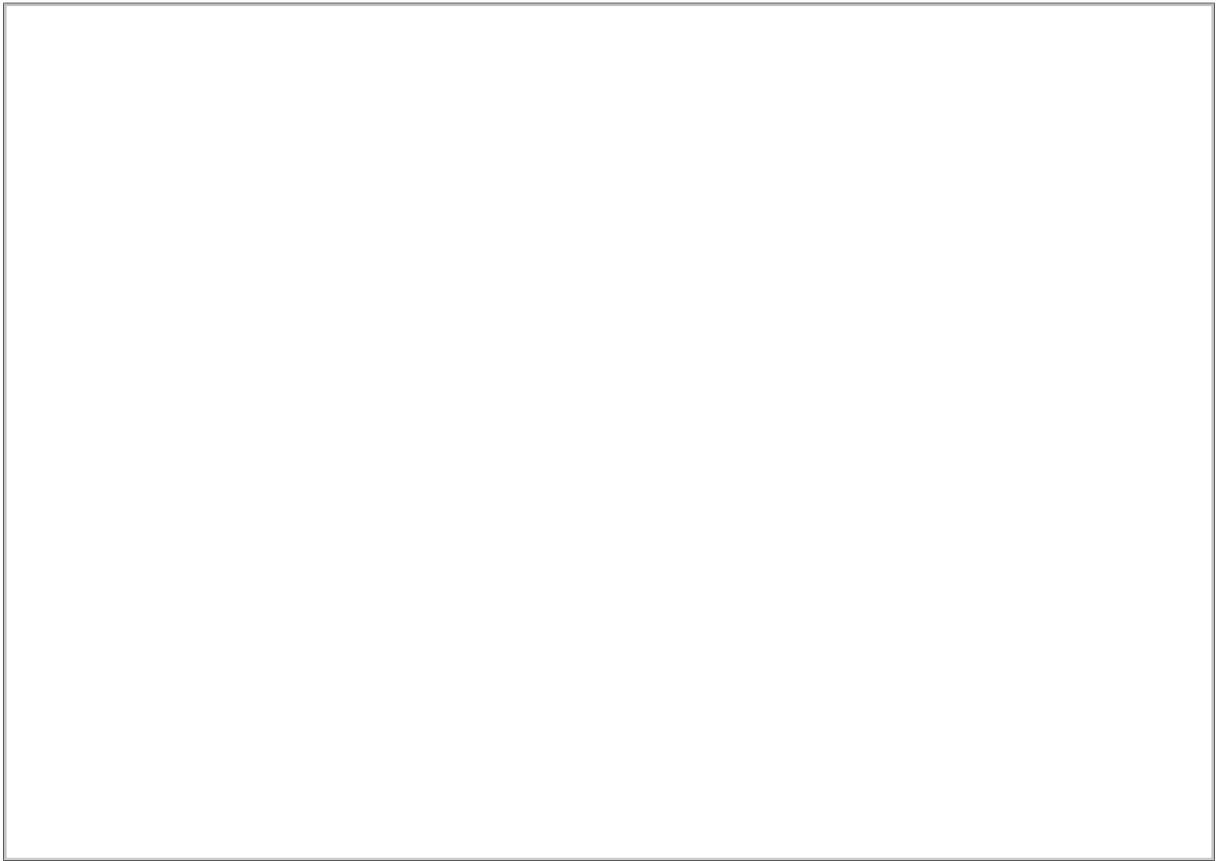

The historic Flood Building, a survivor of the 1906 San Francisco earthquake, stands largely empty: Gap has gone along with nearly every other business in the property with the exception of a tired branch of Dr. Martens and an Urban Outfitters store offering 70 per cent discounts.

On the other side of Market Street is the soon-to-be sold Westfield San Francisco Center – its doorways reeking of urine and every store staffed by hulking security guards. Westfield announced its planned departure on Monday and several occupants of the mall have already said they'll follow.

Days later AT&T announced its iconic flagship store around the corner at 1 Powell Street, one of the largest in the country, was to permanently close.

The local branch of Walgreens is boarded up, although still open, and was recently the scene of a fatal confrontation between a homeless trans woman and a security guard.

Ross Dress For Less and Saks Off 5th are operating a one-in, one-out system to deter thieves while Nordstrom Rack is closing down altogether in September – along with its sister Nordstrom and scores of other stores such as T-Mobile and Payless Shoes.

A map reveals the major businesses which have left, or plan to leave, San Francisco in recent months. Westfield, the most recent to announced its departure, will give up its huge mall - and several occupants have already said they intend to follow

---

Those tourists that still come can't avoid San Francisco's homeless problem. Here a tour bus drives past a tent city in the Tenderloin area

---

TRENDING

Partygate MPs FINALLY deliver their verdict on Boris Johnson

1.6k viewing now

'Huge bang': earthquake rocks regional NSW

8.4k viewing now

Earthquake rocks Sydney as residents hear a 'huge bang'

353 viewing now

Edward Liu, 49, a local resident and hospital worker told DailyMail.com: 'A lot of the stores are closing, a lot of hotels are shutting down. 'You don't get the numbers in downtown anymore because a lot of people are working from home.'

Top Stories
by Daily Mail
'They don't make people want to stay for sure – it's just not very appealing.'

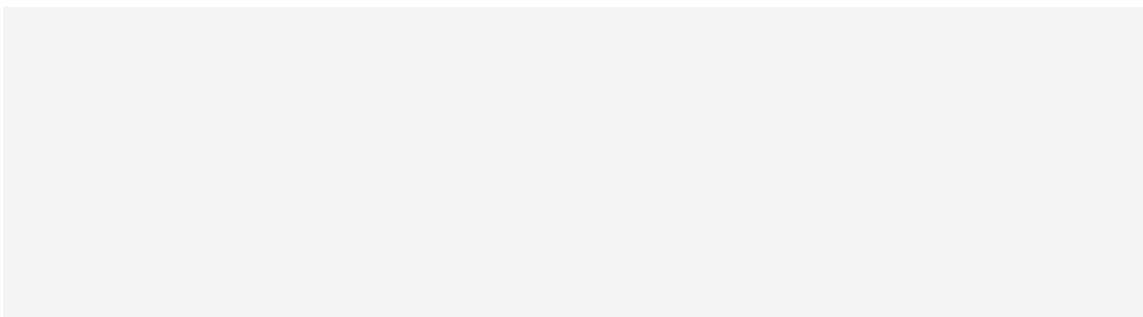

'They defecate, they urinate on the street. They do drugs on the street. The mayor isn't doing anything and it's been like this for a very long time.'

Commercial realtor Mark Ritchie told DailyMail.com that San Francisco had suffered particularly badly from the rise of remote working which has decimated footfall in the financial district and Union Square areas.

He said: 'The office market in San Francisco is devastated. It's had the most severe backlash from Covid and remote work because of how tech-oriented the economy in the Bay Area is.'

'San Francisco is one of the hardest cities to commute into downtown so the remote work crowd, there's even more resistance.'

Last week Park Hotels & Resorts announced it was stopping mortgage payments on two hotels, the 1,921-room Hilton San Francisco and the 1,024-room Park 55, saying: 'Now more than ever, we believe San Francisco's path to recovery remains clouded and elongated by major challenges.'

Fetterman stumbles over his words as he talks about I-95 collapse

Biden finishes CT speech with bizarre tribute to Queen Elizabeth

Prince of Wales and his three children pictured to mark Father's Day

An analysis of official figures and other research reveals San Francisco may lose hundreds of millions of dollars through an exodus of businesses and its failure to recover from Covid

Cute Moment Prince Louis salutes from balcony with other royals

King Charles' celebrates first Trooping the Colour birthday parade

The reality: There's a gap where Gap used to be as building owners advertise desperately for new tenants

Cute Moment Prince Louis salutes from balcony with other royals

Prince Louis steals the show with a very animated display on balcony

Even the candy is under lock and key in Walgreens in San Francisco. A DailyMail.com reporter witnessed four thefts in 15 minutes at the store

The owner of the Huntington Hotel has sold up as he faced foreclosure, according to the Wall Street Journal. The Yotel was sold in a foreclosure auction and Club Quarters is headed to foreclosure while 20 others have loans due in the next two years.

Convention bookers are avoiding San Francisco because of the homeless, leading to even more problems for hotels in a city where tourism numbers are down by 16% over pre-pandemic numbers. There were 26.2 million visitors in 2019, compared with 21.9 million last year.

Hotel revenues were 23 percent lower than pre-covid levels in April 2023 and appear to have stagnated, according to hospitality data firm STR.

Big companies are also leaving en masse, causing office vacancies to reach a record high of 31 percent in May, enough space for 92,000 workers. In April, Salesforce said it will leave its eponymous 30-story Salesforce East building in downtown, where around

Biden hits out at Congress on 'refusal to act' on gun violence

1,000 staff had worked before the pandemic.

Leaders estimate the situation will contribute to a budget shortfall of $1.3 billion in five years. The decline in property tax revenue alone could cost nearly $200 million per year, according to a worst-case scenario drawn up by the city's chief accountant.

A security guard at another branch of Walgreens on Powell Street – home to San Francisco's famous cable cars – had different explanation for the hollowing out of the city center.

'Theft is constant. For my company, this is the busiest store in San Francisco. We used to have two guys here but now it's one so a lot of the time, I'll be dealing with one person and someone else will be taking things. I can't get them all.'

As if to prove his point, a bearded homeless man caught stealing hours earlier attempted to enter the store. Told he couldn't enter and blocked, he screamed: 'Excuse you! I have every right to be here' before swiping a brownie and an apple from a nearby counter and sprinting off.

It was one of four attempted or successful thefts DailyMail.com witnessed at the pharmacy within a 15-minute period and as a result, everything from chocolate bars to a $4.99 bottle of cheap Moscato wine was either locked up or security tagged.

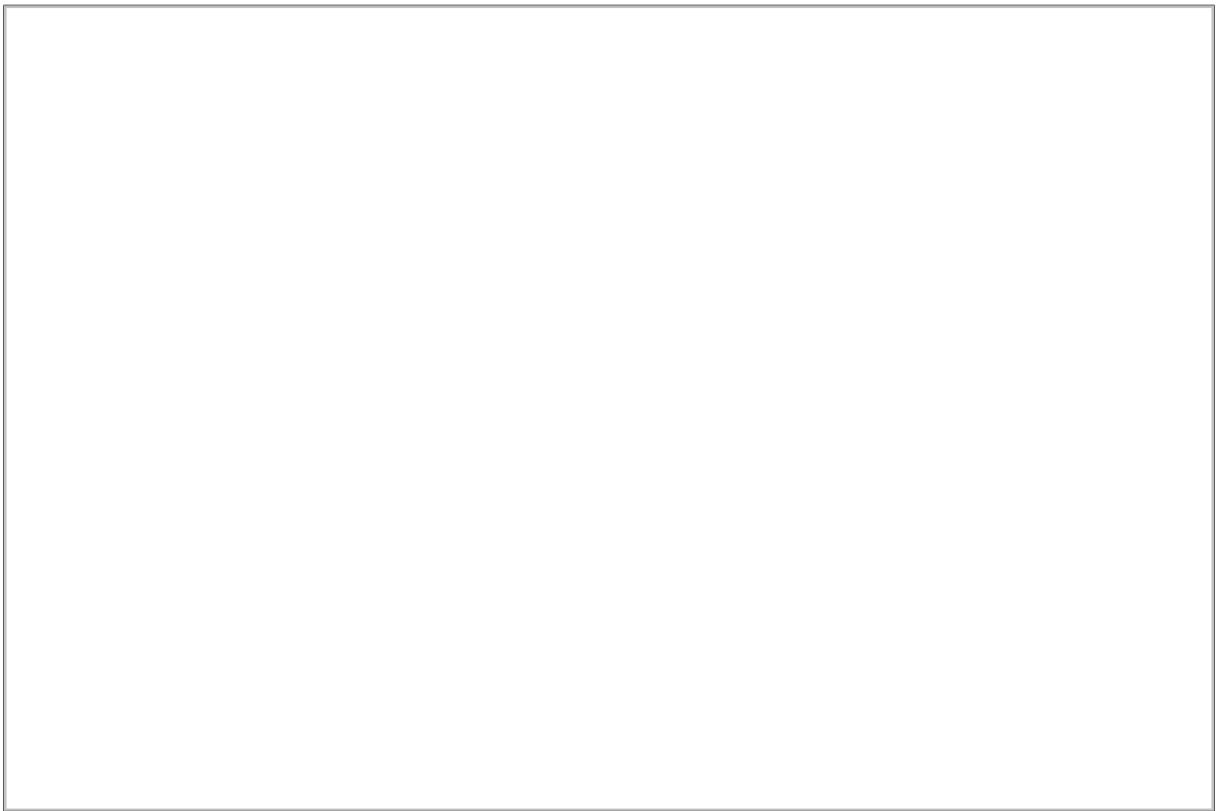

George points out plane to William on Buckingham Palace balcony

Biden gets tongue-tied while discussing his Build Back Better Plan

People do drugs in front of one of the many empty storefront in downtown San Francisco on June 16, 2023. (Josh Edelson for DailyMail.com)

A movie theater is seen inside an almost empty Westfield Mall on Market Street, both of which are expected to close down

---

An empty storefront that used to house the Park City Cafe is seen vacant in downtown San Francisco

---

Another empty storefront that used to house Ria Shoes, now permanently closed, in the Union Square area of San Francisco

---

Along Market street and Mission Street homeless people congregate in hordes in front of an IKEA store

---

Open air use of class A substances is rampant among San Francisco's burgeoning homeless population leading to others avoiding the downtown area of the city

---

A woman lies passed out in front of a children's play area. Even upscale areas such as Russian Hill, which is part of the cable car route along Hyde Street, and tourist hotspots like the Golden Gate Bridge have been affected

---

A family with two young children navigates its way through the filth and squalor at the junction of Jones and Eddy Streets in San Francisco's Tenderloin District

---

Office workers in tech-heavy San Francisco are working from home and tourism is down 16% from pre-pandemic levels, so the streets have been left to the homeless and drug addicts

---

The exasperated guard added: 'That guy, we see him a lot. He's pulled a knife before which is why I remember his face.'

'At the Target down the street, we've seen people come in smoking fentanyl. Obviously, we chase them straight out but half the time they don't even realize they're doing it.'

'I've been doing this a year and I've seen enough. I'm moving to the country where homes are in the low 300s [$300,000] and joining a police department there. It'll be nice to get one callout a week for a cow.'

But San Francisco's problems don't end with petty theft which is down 10 percent overall on the last six months of 2022 but has still occurred over 14,000 times citywide in the first half of 2023.

The city is suffering from a perfect storm: a downturn in the tech industry and workers reluctant to swap their remote jobs for a return to the office post-pandemic.

Footfall in the city's struggling downtown is only around 32 percent of what it was before the pandemic, and ridership on the BART public transport network is down 65 percent.

There has also been an explosion in the number of homeless people – drawn to the city in part by generous assistance programs worth up to $687-per-month.

As of the last official count in 2022, more than 7,000 occupied the tented shanty towns that have sprung up downtown and in the nearby Tenderloin district.

Even Gavin Newsom, California's Democrat governor, has confessed the homelessness crisis in San Francisco and elsewhere in the state is a 'disgrace'. He said California has 'not made progress in the last two decades' but claimed $15.3 billion has been set aside to address the problem.

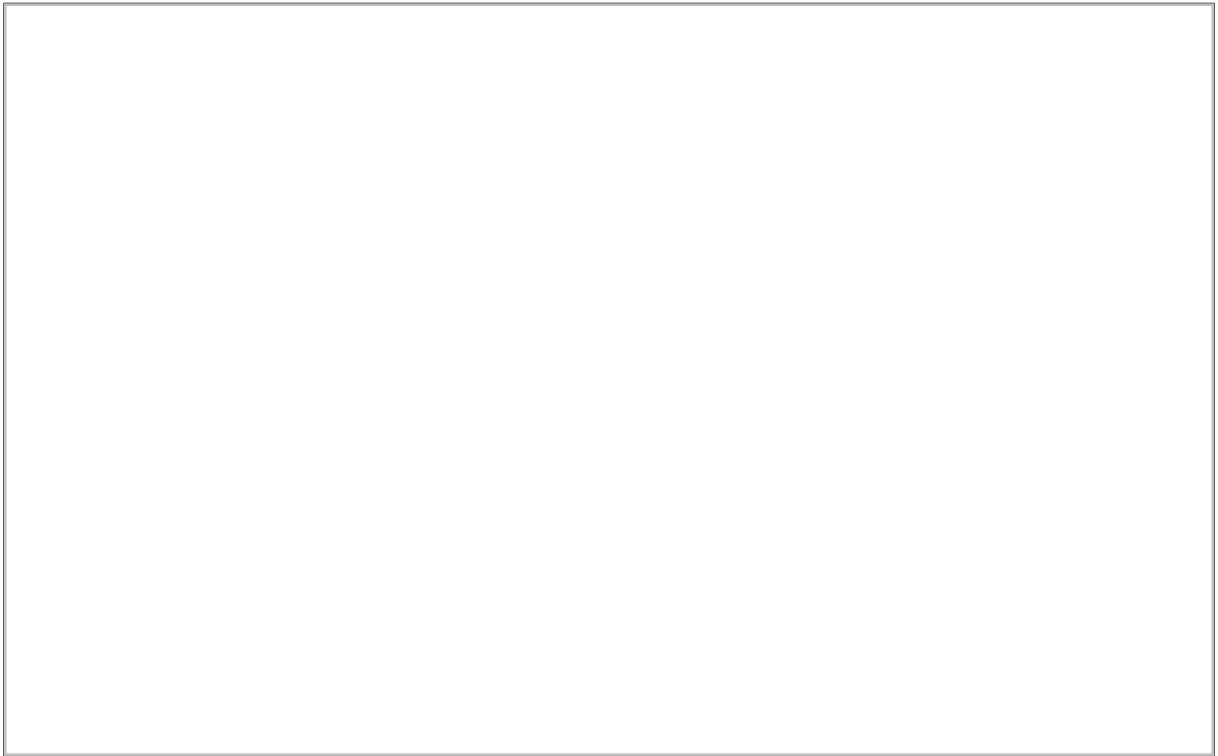

Newsom told Fox's Sean Hannity: 'I don't like what's happening with encampments, I don't like what's happening to streets and sidewalks.'

'I don't like the bashing of my old city San Francisco. Whole Foods did shut down one business, but that was a bad location to begin with.'

Along with the homeless population has come a plague of drug dealers – many plying their trade openly and supplying users with fentanyl which they then smoke in full view of tourists boarding cable cars on Powell and Market Street.

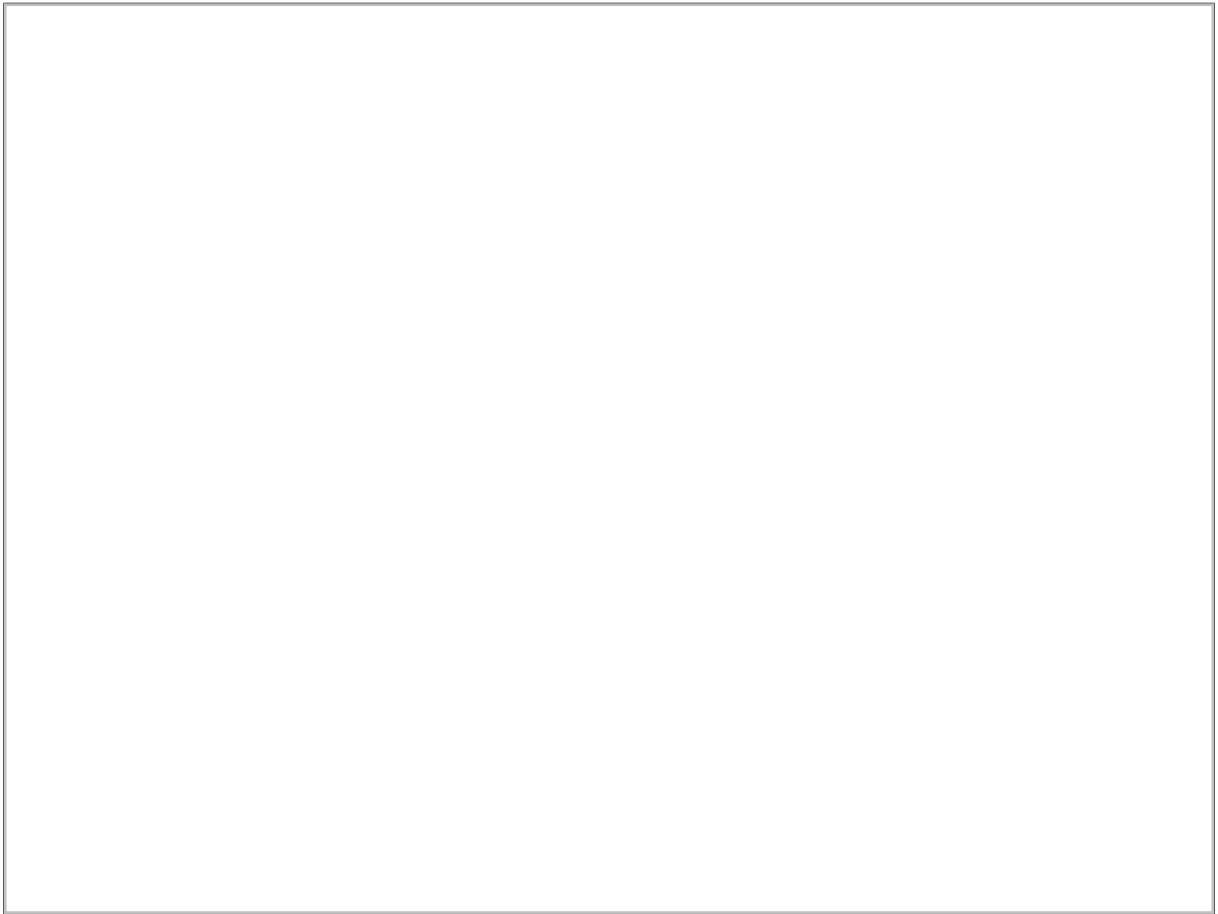

As a result, city figures show there have already been more than 268 drug overdose deaths in the first six months of 2023 alone – a 41 percent increase on last year. Even upscale areas such as Russian Hill, which is part of the cable car route along Hyde Street, and tourist hotspots like the Golden Gate Bridge have been affected.

Both now carry signs warning people to remove their belongings from their cars to avoid break-ins while at the end of the cable car route, at Fisherman's Wharf, homeless people are starting to set up camp on the benches near the station.

Homeless people smoke drugs in front of a vacated DSW Shoe Warehouse just off Union Square in downtown San Francisco

---

A woman drags her earthly possessions past the flagship Westfield San Francisco Center on Market Street

---

The streets of San Francisco have seen an explosion in the number of homeless people – drawn in part by generous assistance programs worth up to $687-per-month

---

Mark, 62, came to San Francisco 30 years ago, planning to jump to his death from the Golden

Gate Bridge before changing his mind. Now he carves walking sticks for tourists. 'I started making them to defend myself,' he admits

---

But former retail paradise Union Square and the Tenderloin are in the eye of the storm: in just a few hours in the streets near Union Square, DailyMail.com repeatedly saw homeless people snoozing in doorways, openly smoking drugs, shoplifting, screaming obscenities at passers-by and, in one case, being revived by medics from the San Francisco Fire Department.

Dylan Anderson, 30, of nearby Alameda, says progressive policies are to blame. He told DailyMail.com: 'This is 100 per cent socialism and liberal views ruining downtown San Francisco.'

'Defund the police, giving people money to live on the streets and be on drugs – the politics don't work.'

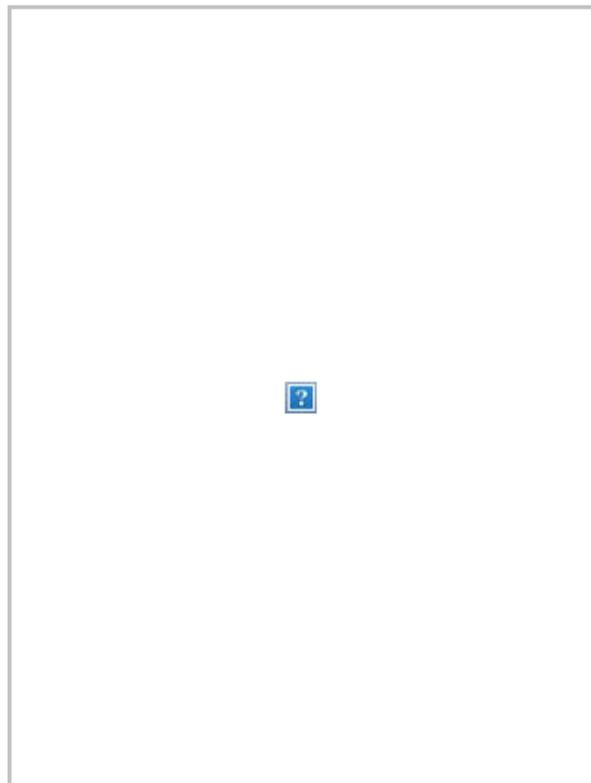

Others, such as Marie, 80, an animal rights activist who was visiting the city from Sonoma, would like to see street dwellers helped into rehab and then homes.

She told DailyMail.com: 'I do feel safe here. There's a lot more homeless than they were but they're not doing anything. I would like to see them taken to rehab and then helped with food and housing.'

For visitors, squalid encampments downtown can come as a shock. 23-year-old Izzy Gaine from Essex, England, was visiting the city – and the US – for the first time to attend a corporate event for architects.

She told DailyMail.com she was stunned by the scale of the drug problem, saying: 'I think it's more a drug problem than a homeless problem. It's shocking. I'm from a village and it's not something I'm used to seeing.'

'On my first day, I came out of the hotel at 9am and could just see street cleaners and homeless people. I thought, where are all the normal people? At 9am, you'd think you'd see lots of people going to work.'

---

Animal rights activist, Marie, 80, visiting from Sonoma, would like to see street dwellers helped into rehab and then homes

---

Even San Francisco's downtown welcome ambassadors are fed up, with one telling DailyMail.com: 'You see foil, it's fentanyl. You see people hunched over, it's fentanyl. 'They say they want the tourists to come back – so do something about the homeless, do something about the fentanyl.'

Astonishingly, even the homeless residents themselves think the drug problem has gotten out of control.

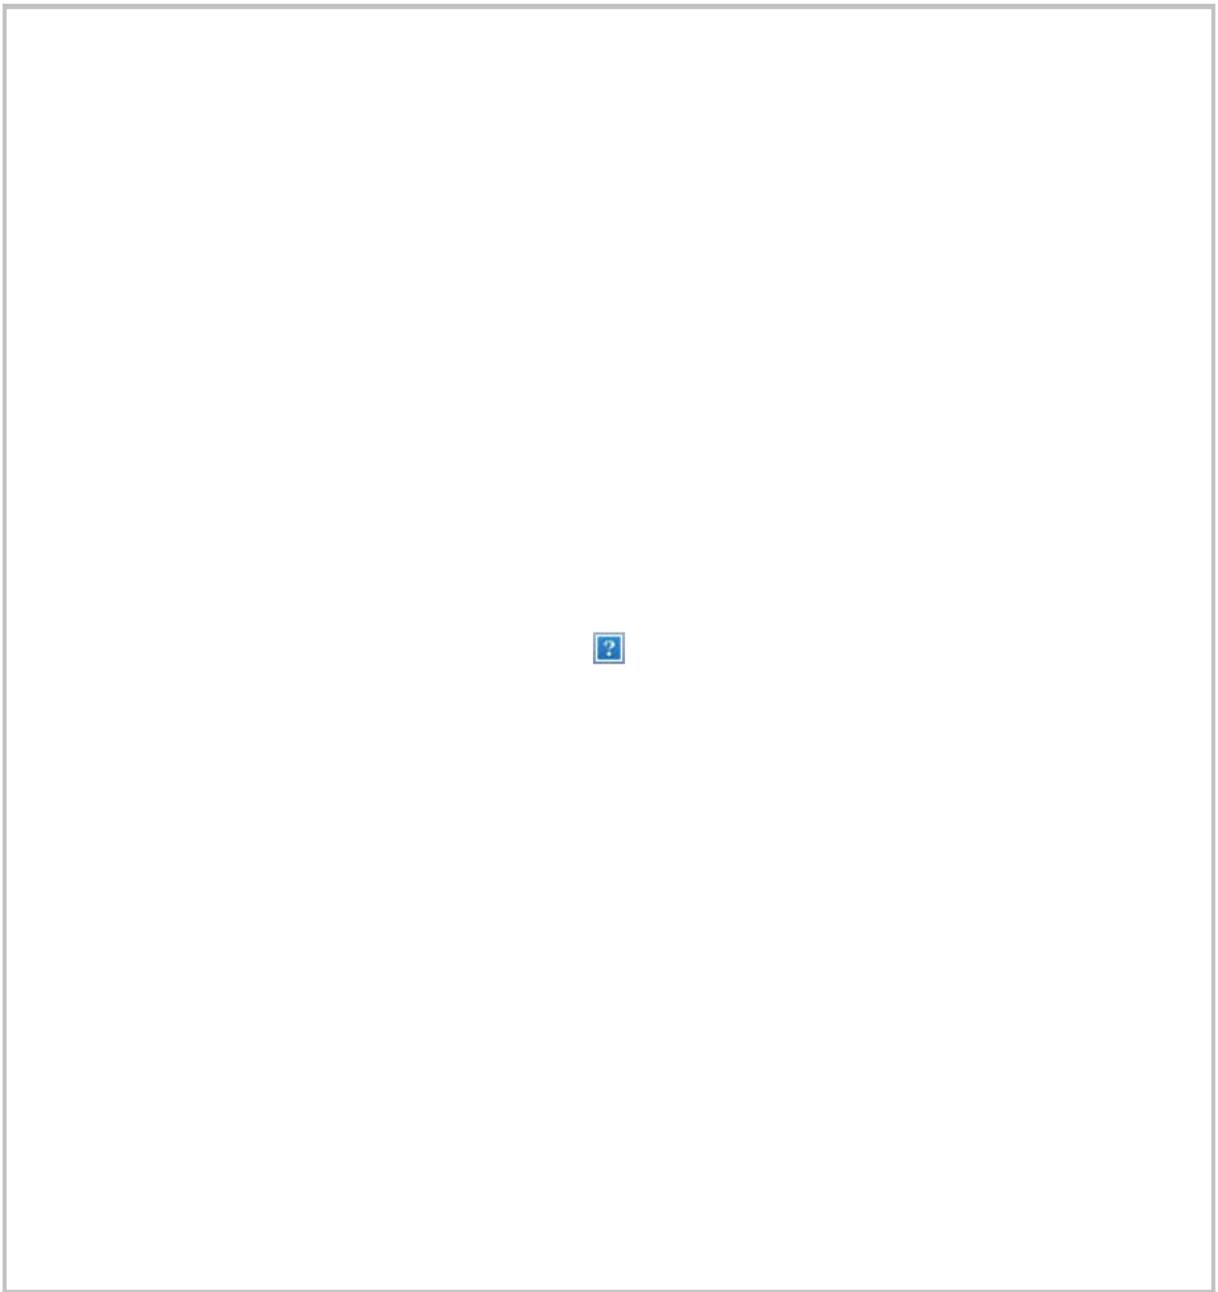

Mark, 62, is originally from Oregon but said he came to San Francisco 30 years ago, planning to jump to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge before changing his mind.

Perched in a wheelchair with a stack of walking sticks which he had carved to sell to tourists, he said: 'I started making sticks to defend myself and I have had to use them. I see things they don't see in their hotel – it's not safe.'

The Market Street branch of Walgreens is boarded up, although still open, and was recently the scene of a fatal confrontation between a homeless trans man and a security guard

---

For Lease signs are everywhere downtown due to stores being frightened away by the number of homeless who have invaded the city

---

It's 5:30 on a Friday afternoon and once-bustling Union Square is virtually deserted as the Bay City faces its existential crisis

---

Ross Dress for Less and Saks Off 5th are both operating a one-in, one-out system in a bid to deter thieves

---

T-Mobile's Metro store on Market Street is barricaded, one of the victims of San Francisco's economic turmoil

---

He added: 'As far as the drugs go, I hate to say it but I don't see enough of the police. You have to have them. It has to be consistent.'

The signs are that the authorities are beginning to listen. In April, California Governor Gavin Newsom announced he was deploying the California Highway Patrol and National Guard to the city to help tackle the problem.

Ultra-woke DA Chesa Boudin was turfed out by angry voters last November and replaced with the more pragmatic Brooke Jenkins who has made it her mission to tackle the drug problem.

Detailing the new city budget in an address at the end of May, Mayor London Breed vowed to crack down on drug dealers while also announcing three 'wellness hubs' which are aimed at getting the homeless off the street and will include safe consumption areas for addicts.

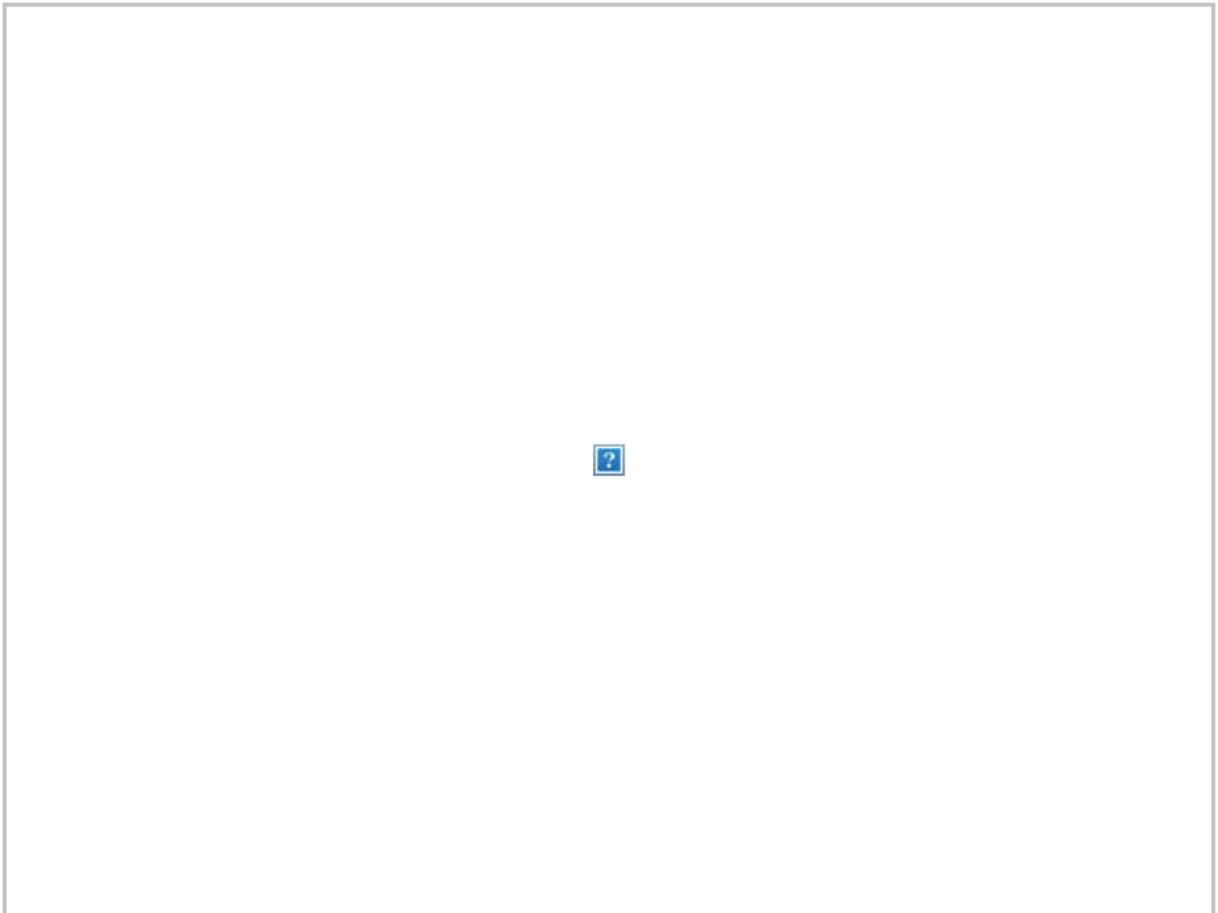

And last week, San Francisco Sheriff Paul Miyamoto announced that a new emergency unit staffed by 130 deputies would be deployed to work alongside the SFPD in the Tenderloin – focusing on arresting drug dealers but also drug users with the aim of getting them off the streets and into the health system.

Speaking to DailyMail.com, he said the new deployment has been made possible by recruiting new deputies and says his staff will 'proactively' tackle dealers.

'In terms of public safety, it's very challenging. We have an area of our city that has been overrun with people engaged in harmful behavior which has affected the entire community,' Miyamoto said.

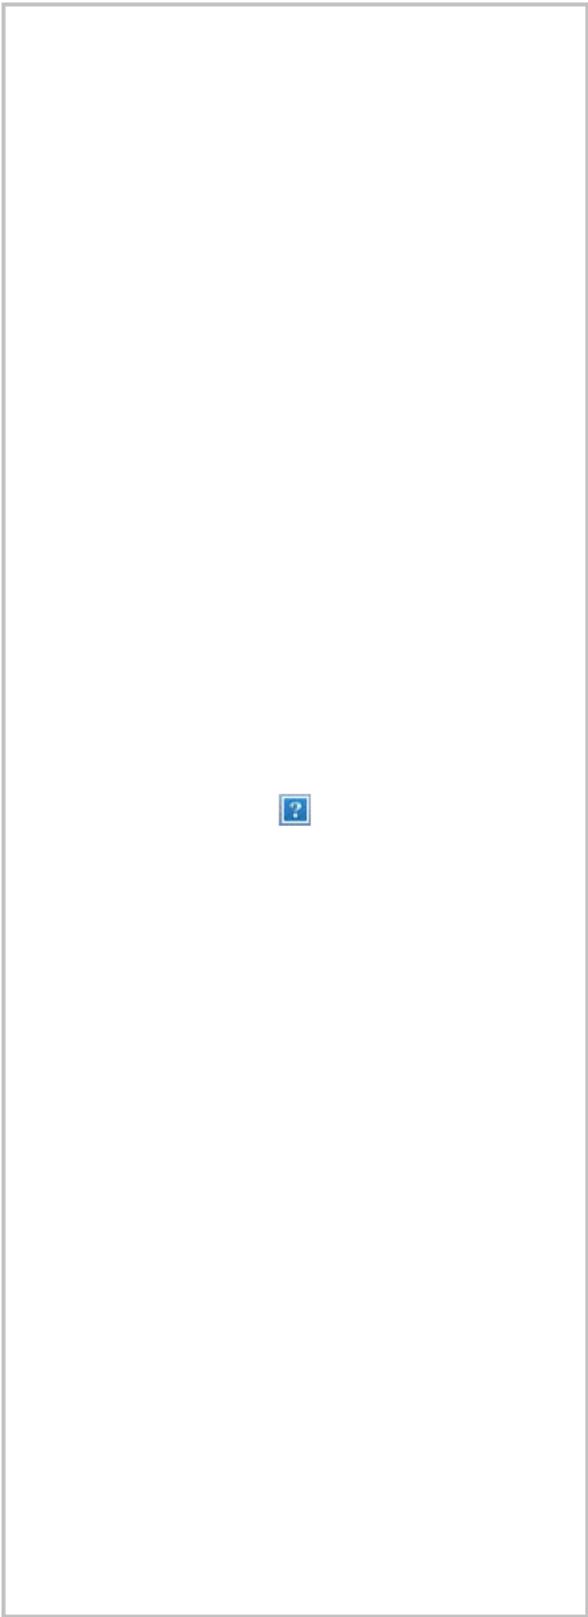

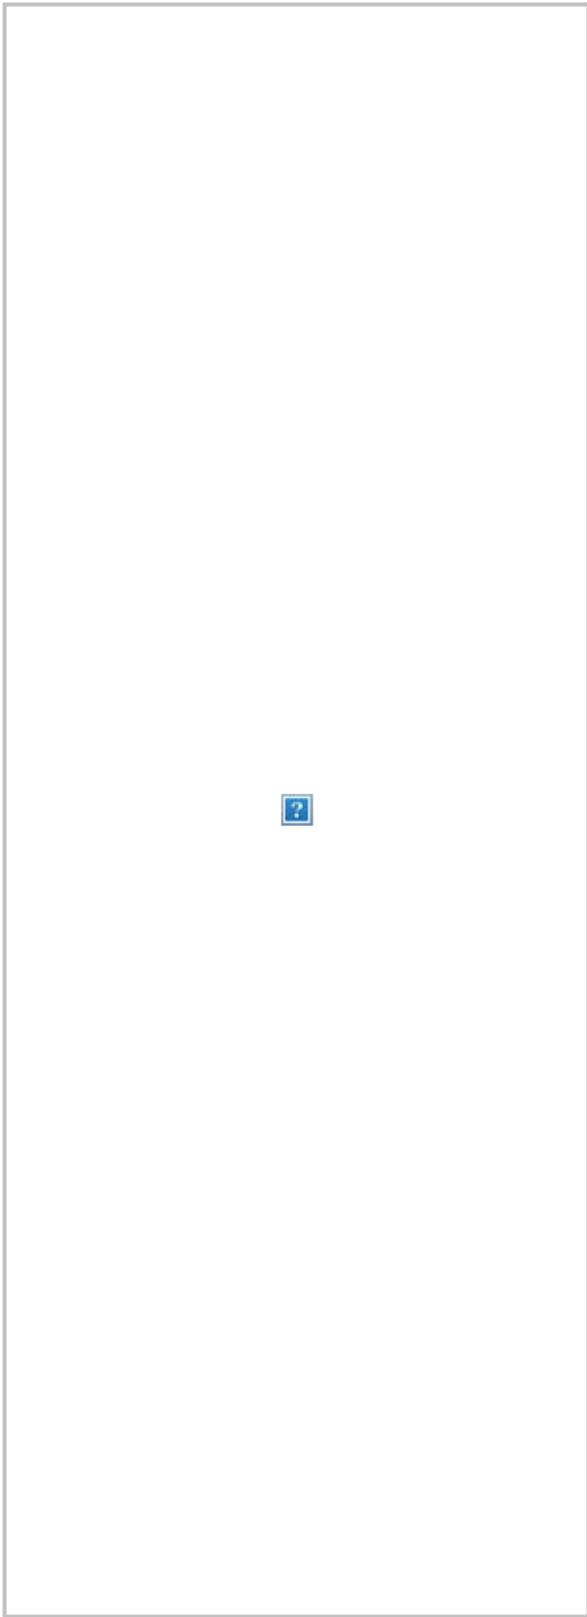

'The Tenderloin historically has been a challenge for the city as a whole, in terms of creating a safe place for the entire community.

'There are really good people who live in the community but a lot of the individuals who populate the community right now, who are engaged in the criminal and harmful behavior, they are transitory.

A security guard ushers a man he suspected of shoplifting out of Walgreens on Powell Street

---

Dylan Anderson, 30, says progressive policies are to blame, while British visitor Izzy Gaine was amazed there was no-one on the streets when she left her hotel at 9am

---

Russian Hill and tourist hotspots including the Golden Gate Bridge both now carry signs warning people to remove their belongings from their cars to avoid break-ins

---

San Francisco's woes deepened last week when the owner of the Hilton Union Square, the city's largest hotel, and Parc 55, said it would pull out, saying the city's 'path to recovery remains clouded and elongated by major challenges'

---

'They're not residents of the neighborhood but they're unhoused people, people living out on the street, people hurting themselves out on the street.'

'We have a lot of people who come here for help or because we're an open, caring city, and some people are engaged in some harmful behavior right now.'

'We have resources and a strong healthcare system but people have to act on getting that help.'

'One of the reasons both we and the police department are out there very actively right now is to create a safer community by getting people the help they need.'

He added: 'Our number one priority is making sure everyone, not just the residents, but our visitors as well feel safe here.'

But Cassandra Costello of the San Francisco Travel Association disputed the idea that the city is in decline. She told DailyMail.com visitor arrivals were up 29% in 2022 compared to the previous year and international visitors were up 211%.

'The demand for international travel to San Francisco has sparked the introduction of new airline routes to the San Francisco International Airport,' she said.

'Starting July 1, Norse Atlantic Airways will be providing three direct flights per week between SFO and London-Gatwick. Norse joins other airlines who have recently added nonstop routes to SFO including LEVEL Airlines, providing direct flights from Barcelona and ZIPAIR, providing direct flights from Tokyo.'

And others see hope. Realtor Ritchie says bad though things might be in San Francisco now, he expects the city to bounce back – helped by an artificial intelligence boom.

He told DailyMail.com: 'San Francisco will be back. We'll surprise everyone.'

'I think we're going to see an AI employment boom in the Bay Area, that's what I'm going to say.'

'Drugs are a big problem. It's not all over the city and it's in a few obvious spots but unfortunately, those obvious spots like the Tenderloin are right under the feet of the business tourists and the conventions. It couldn't be worse because they're right on top of each other.'

'But when you drive out to the wealthier neighborhoods or the outer more middle-class neighborhoods of San Francisco, it's fine and the neighborhood street retail system is thriving. There's plenty of good news out there.'

---

Share or comment on this article: Tourists, workers and shoppers abandon San Francisco leaving it to homeless and drug addled

From: John Beshears
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 12:38:59 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      John Beshears

Email                              jlbeshears@comcast.net

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Anjali Billa
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 12:25:28 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Anjali Billa

Email                              anjalibilla@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Anjali Billa
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 12:25:27 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Anjali Billa

Email                              anjalibilla@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Kusum Wagle
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 12:20:29 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Kusum Wagle
Email                              aqua51@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Nina Block
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 12:17:16 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Nina Block

Email                              lemon.dolores@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Jonah Purinton
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 12:08:45 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Jonah Purinton
Email                              jonah.purinton@gmail.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Michael Sweeney
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:50:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Michael Sweeney
Email                              mppsweeney@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Moraya Khan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:40:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Moraya Khan

Email morkhan@comcast.net

I live in District District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Karen Goldstein
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:35:36 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Karen Goldstein

Email                              fleasus@gmail.com

I live in District              District 11

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Rita Fahrner
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:35:34 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Rita Fahrner
Email                             ritakell@comcast.net
I live in District             District 9

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Karen Goldstein
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:35:27 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Karen Goldstein

Email                              fleasus@gmail.com

I live in District              District 11

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Rita Fahrner
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:35:19 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Rita Fahrner
Email                              ritakell@comcast.net
I live in District              District 9

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Carol Sorgen
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:30:35 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Carol Sorgen
Email                              cmsorgen@comcast.net
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mabel Ng
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:30:15 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mabel Ng
Email                              mcfng@hotmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Andrey Skripnikov
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:25:27 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Andrey Skripnikov

Email                             andreyskripnikov@gmail.com

I live in District             District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Julie Paul
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:25:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Julie Paul
Email                              juliepaul164@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Julie Paul
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:25:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Julie Paul
Email                             juliepaul164@gmail.com
I live in District             District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Andrey Skripnikov
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:25:22 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Andrey Skripnikov

Email                             andreyskripnikov@gmail.com

I live in District             District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Kindra Wentworth
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:20:32 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Kindra Wentworth

Email kcwentworth@gmail.com

I live in District District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Kindra Wentworth
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:20:30 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Kindra Wentworth

Email kcwentworth@gmail.com

I live in District District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Wayne Duncan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:15:20 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Wayne Duncan
Email                              bdwld@msn.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Wayne Duncan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:15:18 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Wayne Duncan
Email                              bdwld@msn.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Barbara Duncan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:11:47 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Barbara Duncan

Email bdwld@msn.com

I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Di Gao
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:08:37 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Board Of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不现实的。我要求的是明显減少正在侵蚀我们城市的露天毒品销售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Di Gao
tddidi@gmail.com
456 Lisbon st
San Francisco , California 94112

From: David English
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 11:08:22 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      David English
Email                              cobweb_isle0r@icloud.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Julie Ortiz
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:50:38 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Julie Ortiz
Email amberjul@gmail.com
I live in District District 4

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: David Golden
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:45:17 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      David Golden
Email                              dgolden@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Solange Levy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:40:29 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Solange Levy
Email                              solange94121@hotmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Solange Levy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:40:28 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Solange Levy
Email                              solange94121@hotmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Patricia Whelehan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:40:20 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Patricia Whelehan
Email                              sflnkny@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 11

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Gary Kendall
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:25:38 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Gary Kendall
Email                              gary_k@pacbell.net
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Abby Davis
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:25:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Abby Davis
Email abbyj.davis@gmail.com
I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Abby Davis
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:25:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Abby Davis
Email abbyj.davis@gmail.com
I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Gary Kendall
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:25:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Gary Kendall
Email                              gary_k@pacbell.net
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: D Benjamin
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:20:37 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      D Benjamin
Email                              shrines_also.0r@icloud.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Phillip Zakhour
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:20:29 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Phillip Zakhour
Email                              philzakhour@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mariana Quintanilla
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:20:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mariana Quintanilla
Email                              mlo1420@gamil.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.
Mariana - a concern San Francisco resident

---

From: Judi Hurabiell
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:15:15 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Judi Hurabiell
Email                              jmhurabiell1@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Teresa Durling
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:05:26 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Teresa Durling
Email                              tadurling@sbcglobal.net
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Marie-Joie Hughes
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:05:26 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Marie-Joie Hughes
Email mjoie65@yahoo.com
I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Teresa Durling
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:05:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Teresa Durling

Email                              tadurling@sbcglobal.net

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Marie-Joie Hughes
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 10:05:17 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Marie-Joie Hughes
Email                              mjoie65@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: John Ng
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:55:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      John Ng
Email                              JohnNgSF@aol.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:

Dear Supervisors,

Stop destroying the City as we remember it. Your policies has rendered SF unsafe for us to leave our homes. As a native San Franciscan, we don't feel safe on Muni, nor parking our car on any public street or in any parking lot. Property crime and the criminals roaming our SF streets have made our City difficult to live in. Our City leadership needs to be replaced.

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Marcus Quintanilla
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:50:41 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Marcus Quintanilla
Email                              marcus.salvato.quintanilla@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Susannah Wegner
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:50:34 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Susannah Wegner
Email                              wegnersusannah@gmail.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Sheri Giacinto
To: Board of S. of San Francisco
Subject: Homeless rush: mothers take city car to bread in San Francisco
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:47:49 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

This is what YOU have allowed to happen.

The City has for many many years listened to the advocates for the homeless and not it's law abiding citizens.

We will never recover from this. It has gone too far now, and our beautiful City will never be the same.

I was born here in 1946 so I know how wonderful it was!

Homeless rush in where tourists fear to tread in San Francisco

<https://url.avanan.click/v2/?https://mol.im/a/12185831/YXAzOnNmZHOyOmlE6bozzNmZkZmZlMmRlNTRlYTO1MTEwYjQ5NDRhYWRIKjsoODo2OmY4ZW6MmE6OTM5ZThYjA1OWYyODk0MGlxMTcuMGESNAwZGZkZjctNTU0MmlyZWZmMDM3YWEmYjllNDk1NkYmYmMDpwOjQ>

Sent from my iPad

From: renee tannenbaum
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:41:46 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      renee tannenbaum
Email                              reneetbaum@gmail.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Alison Fong
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:38:17 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Alison Fong
Email                              ayfong1@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Constance Lee
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:23:54 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Constance Lee
Email                              connieolee@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mark Clark
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:10:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mark Clark

Email                              mpclark704@icloud.com

I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Justin Truong
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:05:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Justin Truong
Email                             justintruong56@gmail.com
I live in District             District 11

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: David Uyeda
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:05:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     David Uyeda
Email                             dkuyeda@hotmail.com
I live in District             District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mary Lee Pulvermann
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:05:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mary Lee Pulvermann
Email                              mlpulvermann@gmail.com
I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Justin Truong
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:05:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Justin Truong
Email                             justintruong56@gmail.com
I live in District             District 11

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: David Uyeda
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:05:13 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      David Uyeda
Email                              dkuyeda@hotmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Sheila Stuart
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 9:00:18 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Sheila Stuart
Email                              sstuart466@aol.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Qiang Zeng
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:52:53 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Qiang Zeng
Email                              johnzeng@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Dale Wong
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:45:54 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Dale Wong
Email                              dalewong108@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Norman Kondy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:39:47 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Norman Kondy

Email                              nkondy@sbcglobal.net

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                              Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Aleksey Klochkov
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:25:28 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Aleksey Klochkov
Email                             aklochkov@yahoo.com
I live in District             District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Aleksey Klochkov
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:25:28 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent    Aleksey Klochkov
Email                      aklochkov@yahoo.com
I live in District        District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Jann Jeung
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:20:26 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Jann Jeung
Email                              jncao@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Rick Parina
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:20:22 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Rick Parina
Email                              parinarichard8@gmail.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

Rick Parina
737 Post St.
San Francisco,
CA. 94109

---

From: JOHN CERVANTES
To: Board of Supervisors (BOS); PrestonStaff (BOS); ChanStaff (BOS); Mandelman, Rafael (BOS); Peskin, Aaron (BOS); MelgarStaff (BOS); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha (BOS); Walton Shamann (BOS)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:15:31 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent JOHN CERVANTES

Email city10s@pacbell.net

I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Douglas DesCombaz
To: Board of Supervisors (BOS); PrestonStaff (BOS); ChanStaff (BOS); Mandelman, Rafael (BOS); Peskin, Aaron (BOS); MelgarStaff (BOS); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha (BOS); Walton Shamann (BOS)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:15:30 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Douglas DesCombaz
Email doug@descombaz.com
I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Connie and other Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: JOHN CERVANTES
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:15:30 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      JOHN CERVANTES

Email                              city10s@pacbell.net

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Douglas DesCombaz
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:15:27 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Douglas DesCombaz
Email                              doug@descombaz.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Connie and other Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Linda Mathews
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:15:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Linda Mathews
Email                              linda.mathews@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Linda Mathews
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:15:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Linda Mathews
Email                              linda.mathews@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Brad Green
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:15:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Brad Green

Email                              bradg@5ht.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                              Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Brad Green
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:15:18 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Brad Green

Email                              bradg@5ht.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                              Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mark Macy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:10:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent Mark Macy
Email markm@macyarchitecture.com
I live in District District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message: Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Gerald Schall
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:10:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Gerald Schall

Email                              glschall@aol.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Nicholas Duffy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:10:23 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Nicholas Duffy
Email                              nckdffy@icloud.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Mark Dietrich
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:04:04 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Mark Dietrich
Email                              markdietrichsf@gmail.com
I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Kenneth Camp
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 8:03:41 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Kenneth Camp
Email                              kennycamp@gmail.com
I live in District              District 5

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: michael Regan
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:50:17 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      michael Regan

Email                              myoldgoat@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                      Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

You want to know why downtown and you are failing? People do not feel safe going downtown any longer and the city has made it so difficult to drive and park that no one wants to throw all that frustration. I haven't been downtown for anything (except jury duty) in at least 5 years.

Thank you.

---

From: Colt Martinez
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:45:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Colt Martinez

Email                              coltdmartinez@gmail.com

I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Colt Martinez
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:45:25 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Colt Martinez
Email                              coltdmartinez@gmail.com
I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Kyndle Martinez
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:43:21 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Kyndle Martinez

Email                              kyndleamartinez@gmail.com

I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                              Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Seth Martinez
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:42:59 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Seth Martinez

Email                              sethjmartinez@gmail.com

I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Shelley Martinez
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:40:44 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Shelley Martinez
Email                              shelley.martinez@gmail.com
I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Edwin Martinez
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 7:40:02 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Edwin Martinez

Email                              me.edwinsisonmartinez@gmail.com

I live in District              District 7

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Arthur Cinader
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 1:07:24 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent     Arthur Cinader
Email                             acinader@gmail.com
I live in District             District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                         Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Roberta Economidis
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 11:36:59 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Roberta Economidis
Email                              reconomidis@yahoo.com
I live in District              District 3

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Annie Young
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 4:17:39 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Board Of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不现实的。我要求的是明显減少正在侵蚀我们城市的露天毒品销售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Annie Young
munnyoung@gmail.com
2090 34th Ave
San Francisco , California 94116

From: Michael Murano
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 3:36:18 PM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Michael Murano
Email                              mmurano@gmail.com
I live in District              District 2

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Stephanie Lehman
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\)
Subject: Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 10:52:47 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Message to the Board of Supervisors

From your constituent      Stephanie Lehman

Email                              slehman21@yahoo.com

I live in District              District 1

Protect Budget Investments in Public Safety!

Message:                        Dear Supervisors,

I urge you to support Mayor Breed's proposed investments in public safety and proposed response to our open-air drug markets.

Everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities, and that requires sustained investment in building back our police force and a focused comprehensive effort to close our open-air drug markets. It also requires your political will to invest in solutions like the ones proposed in the Mayor's public safety budget. Investments including the funding proposed for more police officers, civilian SFPD employees, prosecutors, and funding for the coordinated city effort led by the Department of Emergency Management to shut down the City's open-air drug markets are crucial to improving SF for everyone!

Without these investments, San Franciscans will lose vital components of public safety. We cannot afford to backslide on our long-term police recruitment goals, and our efforts to close our open-air drug markets.

Now is not the time to divert resources away from public safety.

Thank you.

---

From: Chunyan Chen
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 10:03:58 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Board Of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不现实的。我要求的是明显減少正在侵蚀我们城市的露天毒品销售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Chunyan Chen
callielui@yahoo.com
254 Hahn street
San Francisco , California 94134

From: Jiwen Zeng
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 9:36:08 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Board Of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不现实的。我要求的是明显減少正在侵蚀我们城市的露天毒品销售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Jiwen Zeng
evazeng8828@gmail.com
1810 27th Ave
San Francisco, CA94122

From: Adriana Diaz
To: MayorLondonBreed@sf.org; Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Thank you for prioritizing police funding!
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 6:44:02 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Hi Mayor Breed + Board of Supervisors,

I saw Jackie Fielder post on instagram asking for a call to action to complain to you about you prioritizing police funding. And well, it inspired me to do the opposite. Thank you for wanting to increase the budget for police.

As the victim of multiple crimes recently, I don't just "feel" unsafe, I know that I've been unsafe. My stance has changed to be significantly more pro-policing and increasing police funding makes me feel safer. Regardless of how each of you feel about police funding, I look forward to each of you personally driving results from this (and any other relevant) funding to reduce crime, and address the drug crisis on our streets.

Also, please keep up the rhetoric about SF addressing crime! I'm all about action, but I think rhetoric about improving crime in sf is more than a way to get votes. I actually think it helps a bit. If the media believes sf is a lawless destination with no consequences, we will attract people who looking for a destination (even if it's untrue). If people don't think there can get caught for poor behavior then they have no concern of any consequences.

Sincerely,

Adriana Díaz
SF District 3 Resident

@Supervisor Engardio - I appreciate your instagram posts explaining the actions you're personally driving to improve your district. I also appreciate your blog posts explaining your stances, and actions we can take to make voters voices heard to the right folks.

@Supervisor Peskin - I appreciate your May 22 letter to the mayor. I'm excited to see you, post more about how you're partnering with the Public Safety Committee to improve our cities drug and crime crisis.

@Supervisor Dorsey @Supervisor Stefani - I appreciate you also being on the Public Safety Committee. It sounds like the most challenging job in the world since San Francisco's residents are polarized on how to best improve crime, addiction and homelessness in our city. I appreciate every time you use your platform to try to inform the public share that SF is not a place where crime should run rampant.

From: emilfunken@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Emil Funk Vangsgaard
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:06:13 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Emil Funk Vangsgaard
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: xaberd@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Xavier Guillaume
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:06:22 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Xavier Guillaume
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
To: BOS-Supervisors; BOS-Legislative Aides
Cc: Calvillo, Angela \(BOS\); Somera, Alisa \(BOS\); Ng, Wilson \(BOS\); De Asis, Edward \(BOS\); Mchugh, Eileen \(BOS\); BOS Legislation, \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: 84 Letters regarding File Nos. 230644 and 230645
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:14:33 AM
Attachments: 84 Letters regarding File Nos. 230644 and 230645.pdf

---

Hello,

Please see attached for 84 letters regarding File Nos. 230644 and 230645.

File No. 230644 - Budget and Appropriation Ordinance for Departments - FYs 2023-2024 and 2024-2025

File No. 230645 - Annual Salary Ordinance - FYs 2023-2024 and 2024-2025

Sincerely,

Joe Adkins
Office of the Clerk of the Board
San Francisco Board of Supervisors
1 Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett Place, Room 244
San Francisco, CA 94102
Phone: (415) 554-5184 | Fax: (415) 554-5163
board.of.supervisors@sfgov.org | www.sfbos.org

From: xaberd@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Xavier Guillaume
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:06:25 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Xavier Guillaume
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: emilfunken@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Emil Funk Vangsgaard
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:06:21 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Emil Funk Vangsgaard
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: aquilici97@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Antonio Quilici
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:37:31 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Antonio Quilici
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: kielygomes@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Karen Schwartz
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:31:17 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Karen Schwartz
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: herd\_queen@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Anna-Marie vargas
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:26:11 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Anna-Marie vargas
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: rgulabi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Gulabi Rajasekar
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:22:58 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Gulabi Rajasekar
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: bets12979@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Betsy Rew
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:56:08 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Betsy Rew
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: susan.criswell@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Susan Criswell
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:52:51 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Susan Criswell
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: istvan.szanda@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Istvan Szanda
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:46:04 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Istvan Szanda
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: simiadebajo@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Simileoluwa Adebajo
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:47:52 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Simileoluwa Adebajo
Los Angeles, CA 90017

From: edgargee@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Edgar Gee
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 11:22:48 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Edgar Gee
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: nickel\_virtue.0i@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Zachary Kerns
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:59:56 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Zachary Kerns
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: isabellagomide@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Isabella Gomide
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:47:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Isabella Gomide
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: jsb422@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Josh Brown
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 9:16:43 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Josh Brown
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: cloudsrest789@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of KAREN WONG
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:41:53 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
KAREN WONG
San Francisco, CA 94108

From: cloudsrest789@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of KAREN WONG
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:15:47 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
KAREN WONG
San Francisco, CA 94108

From: sandysu1130@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sandy Su
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:43:30 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sandy Su
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: donnalock2001@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Donna Lock
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:17:45 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Donna Lock
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: sfwaterbug@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Polly Shaw
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:50:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Polly Shaw
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: cheryl@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Cheryl Traverse
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:34:07 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Cheryl Traverse
San Francisco, CA 94131

From: rebootica@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rebecca Roman
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:55:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Roman
Alameda, CA 94501

From: Terik16@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Teri Tollenaere
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:49:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Teri Tollenaere
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: mmsaladbar.lukens@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Maria Salazar Lukens
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 3:44:24 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Maria Salazar Lukens
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: minger44@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Ming Chow
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 2:52:55 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Ming Chow
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: caitlin.sachdev@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Caitlin Sachdev
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 2:44:53 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Caitlin Sachdev
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: carolinsturtevant@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Carolyn Sturtevant
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:54:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Carolin Sturtevant
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: sparks.hannah@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Hannah Sparks
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:30:32 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Hannah Sparks
San Francisco, CA 94112

From: tjnew@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Thomas Newhall
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:11:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Thomas Newhall
San Jose, CA 95138

From: yehouda.shomron@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Yehouda Shomron
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 1:07:56 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Yehouda Shomron
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: ryan.bach91@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Ryan Bach
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 12:36:57 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Ryan Bach
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: cady shadwick
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: London Breed's proposed budget priorities are trash
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 10:42:39 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Hi Board of Supervisors,

I'm a lifelong resident, a tax payer, a small business owner, an SFUSD parent in San Francisco and it pains me to see a mayor proposing to increase the punitive, carceral systems, like policing, while defunding the preventive efforts that lead to a more peaceful, equitable city, like housing, childcare, food programs; all while going against the will of the voters who voted for Prop C to fund early childhood education. And, it is absolutely absurd that in a city full of academic institutions the mayor has put forth a budget that is far from a research-based approach to creating a thriving, cared for community.

Which city do YOU want to live in: a city where people have access to the support and care that they need, or a city that penalizes the citizens who need equity-focused programs? Let's choose a budget that is a step toward becoming an antiracist city.

The city budget is a direct showing of the city government's values and it would be extremely disappointing and harmful to approve the budget in its currently proposed form. Fund food programs! Fund child care! Fund ethics! Fund small site affordable housing!

with respect,
Cady Shadwick

From: jlcawthorne@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jason Cawthorne
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 9:47:12 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jason Cawthorne
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: markzier@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mark Zier
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 8:52:01 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mark Zier
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: nedra\_ruiz@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nedra Ruiz
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:23:40 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nedra Ruiz
Belvedere Tiburon, CA 94920

From: danielandrez3@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Andreza Cezario
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 6:22:01 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Andreza Cezario
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: pattyjer2911@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Patty Santamaria
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:54:03 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Patty Santamaria
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: b.bice23@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Brian Bice
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 5:44:34 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Brian Bice
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: test@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nikita Annt
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2023 4:17:43 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nikita Annt
94100

From: brendo109@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Brendan Murphy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 5:56:26 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Brendan Murphy
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: lois@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lois Chess
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 12:58:24 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lois Chess
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: patricia.casper77@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Trish Casper
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:59:46 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Trish Casper
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: hnchung@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Howard Chung
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 10:06:42 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Howard Chung
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: jmackowski@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of J.Matthew Mackowski
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 8:01:11 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
J. Matthew Mackowski
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: ronaldtura@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Ronald Tura
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 6:51:52 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Ronald Tura
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: my4987@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of My Nguyen
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 6:45:37 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
My Nguyen
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: karstenmaedje@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Karsten Maedje
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 6:04:55 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Karsten Maedje
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: esotericquiddess@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Amanda Tucker
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 5:01:00 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Amanda Tucker
Oakland, CA 94601

From: crdevou@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Colette Devou
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Monday, June 19, 2023 3:58:53 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Colette Devou
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: lawrence-gordon@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lawrence Gordon
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 6:03:53 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lawrence Gordon
San Francisco, CA 94131

From: yanani1226@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Yanee Buorn
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 3:08:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Yanee Buorn
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: thl001@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Thomas Lee
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:33:46 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Thomas Lee
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: sbernard19@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Susan Bernard
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 2:20:01 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Susan Bernard
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: dobbs027@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Laura Dobbs
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 6:24:40 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Laura Dobbs
Alameda, CA 94501

From: tim@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Timothy Feeley
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 6:09:16 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Timothy Feeley
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: carolinsturtevant@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Carolyn Sturtevant
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Sunday, June 18, 2023 5:48:04 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Carolin Sturtevant
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: searabia@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Silvia E Arabia
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 6:52:10 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Silvia E Arabia
San Francisco, CA 94134

From: jaxsonbrwn@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jacqueline Murphy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 5:01:06 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jacqueline Murphy
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: lwchoi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lucia Choi
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 3:47:35 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lucia Choi
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: alwong@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Al Wong
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 2:54:42 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Al Wong
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: johnnylewiscorey@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of John Corey
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 10:28:24 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed

budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
John Corey
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: maulikgshah@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Maulik Shah
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 10:17:43 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Maulik Shah
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: melissaippo@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Melissa Ippolito
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 9:41:07 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Melissa Ippolito
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: jossikins@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Josselyn Eccleston
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 8:53:53 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Josselyn Eccleston
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: martymurphy04@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Martin Murphy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 7:15:52 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Martin Murphy
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: anderson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Anderson Timoteo da Silva
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 2:44:11 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Anderson Timoteo da Silva
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: scottmacphersonsf@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Scott Macpherson
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 1:17:39 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Scott Macpherson
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: v.vargas17@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Vanessa Vargas
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Saturday, June 17, 2023 1:02:31 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Vanessa Vargas
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: hello.nabibi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nabi Cheung-Cuono
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 11:54:25 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nabi Cheung-Cuono
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: margaret.lilani@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Margaret Lilani
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 11:29:13 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Margaret Lilani
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: erinuyttewaal@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Erin Uyttewaal
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 10:59:44 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Erin Uyttewaal
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: kristenleigh@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kristen Raymond
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 10:03:30 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kristen Raymond
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: sayre@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sayre Ziskin
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 9:26:26 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sayre Ziskin
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: cloudsrest789@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of KAREN WONG
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 8:53:44 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
KAREN WONG
San Francisco, CA 94108

From: brady.c.317@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Chris Brady
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 6:44:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Chris Brady
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: mward@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of McKenzie Ward
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 5:31:32 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
McKenzie Ward
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: carolynkenady@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Carolyn Kenady
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 4:37:38 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Kenady
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: katie.markov@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Katie Markov
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 2:45:01 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Katie Markov
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: sara@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sara de la Riva
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 2:39:27 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sara de la Riva
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: wheeleresimmons@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Wheeler Griffith
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 2:18:02 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Wheeler Griffith
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: michellecurtisharris@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Michelle Harris
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 1:58:16 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Michelle Harris
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: zoejohns@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Zoe Johns Catalano
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 1:46:27 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Zoe Johns Catalano
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: keggertsf@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Karen Eggert
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 12:42:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Karen Eggert
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: kashmaqsood@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kashif Maqsood
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 12:08:19 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kashif Maqsood
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: scot.conner@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Scot Conner
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 16, 2023 10:19:28 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Scot Conner
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: Smith, Ronnie
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Please Support Powell Street Funding Request /The Westin St. Francis on Union Square
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:16:09 AM

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Ronnie Smith

Director of Human Resources Operations

THE WESTIN ST. FRANCIS SAN FRANCISCO ON UNION SQUARE

335 Powell Street
San Francisco, CA 94102
United States

www.westinfrancis.com

T +1 415 774 0377 E ronnie.smith@westin.com

Marriott Bonvoy | Facebook | Instagram | Hotel Video | Virtual Tour

From: shanecastro32@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Shane Saint Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:48:36 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Shane Saint
San Francisco, CA 94140

From: agarwal\_p@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Pankaj Agarwal
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:53:44 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Pankaj Agarwal
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: smahwal@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sapna Mahwal
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:54:25 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sapna Mahwal
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: Silva, Anushka
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Cc: Agullana, Zeny; Grissom, Katie W; Schmittlein, Jack; marisa@unionsquarealliance.com
Subject: Powell Street Funding Support
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 11:57:57 AM
Attachments: image001.png
image003.png

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

ANUSHKA SILVA
Senior Director
Workplace, Retail & Mixed-Use

- anushka.silva@nuveen.com

Phone: +1 415-314-5905

Nuveen Real Estate
560 Mission, 10th Floor
San Francisco, CA 94109

nuveen
REAL ESTATE

From: T. Brock
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary
Cc: Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); marisa@unionsquarealliance.com
Subject: Powell Street Funding Support
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 12:27:21 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We own the property at the southwest corner of Powell and O'Farrell Streets. We are asking for your support for the Powell Street funding proposed by Mayor Breed and Board President Peskin as part of the FY 23-4 budget.

Union Square is the gateway to San Francisco, and Powell Street is the gateway to Union Square. Every day, 9,000 people exit BART at Powell and the 38 bus line carries over 50,000 passengers per day stopping at Powell Street for Union Square. Of course there are also the cable cars running along Powell filled with tourist taking pictures and videos that they distribute widely through social media. This area is truly one of the most customer facing places in the city and deserves to be maintained accordingly.

We endorse the $2 million to improve the physical streetscape environment along with $2 million from the SFMTA that Mayor Breed and Board President Peskin have proposed. Of primary concern to us are the parklets along Powell Street that are in very poor condition and need to be removed. The present condition of Powell Street deters potential tenants and degrades the shopping experience for our visitors. This work is overdue.

We also endorse the additional proposed $2 million to address vacant and struggling storefronts along Powell Street. This presents a novel opportunity to invent creative incentives tailored to the unique needs of the merchants and property owners that will accelerate the recovery of this important corridor and by extension all of San Francisco.

We ask for your support.

Very truly yours,

Tom and Tammy Brock
167 Powell

From: Mathews, Kavita
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Cc: marisa@unionsquarealliance.com
Subject: Union Square
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 1:04:32 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We are owners of 200 Powell Street and 799 Market Street. We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Best,
Kavita

Kavita Mathews

Senior Vice President
Western Region Head of Acquisitions
744 Cowper Street
Palo Alto, CA 94301
Tel: 650.304.0022 Cell: 609.915.8481
kmathews@asbrealstate.com www.asbrealstate.com

From: Terry Lewis
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary
Cc: Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Downtown revitalization
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 1:14:41 PM
Attachments: image003.png

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving the proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! The Downtown area generates a large share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. An inviting downtown corridor is essential to attracting leisure, convention and business visitors.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco. It is the very first stop for many visitors and should be vibrant and showcase what San Francisco is all about. We need your help to restore this area to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this matter.

Warm regards,
Terry Lewis

Terry Lewis | Complex General Manager
REPRESENTING THE HILTON HOTELS OF SAN FRANCISCO UNION SQUARE
t: +1 415-202-7096 | m: +1 415-203-7260 | terry.lewis@hilton.com

HILTON SAN FRANCISCO UNION SQUARE & HILTON PARC 55 SAN FRANCISCO
333 O'Farrell Street | San Francisco CA 94102 | USA

---

This transmission is not a digital or electronic signature and cannot be used to form, document, or authenticate a contract. Hilton and its affiliates accept no liability arising in connection with this transmission. Copyright 2023 Hilton Proprietary and Confidential

From: Casey Neuburger
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Powell Street Pedestrian Improvement and Tenant Attraction
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 1:23:06 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Thank you for your support.

Casey Neuburger | Director of Hotel Operations

cneuburger@hotelnikkosf.com

P 415-394-1131 C 415-725-2530

Hotel Nikko San Francisco | 222 Mason Street | San Francisco, CA 94102

hotelnikkosf.com

From: Gladyne Mitchell
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Budget and Appropriations committee - Powell Street funding
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 1:35:21 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

111 ELLIS BUILDING
Gladyne K. Mitchell Family Trust
2000 Washington St. #4
San Francisco, CA 94109-2844

June 21, 2023

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

We strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown provides the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request.

Gladyne K. Mitchell, Trustee

From: Cicisly, Lauren
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); [MandelmanStaff, \[BOS\]](#); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 2:41:49 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Lauren Cicisly

NOTICE: This e-mail message and any attachments are intended solely for the use of the intended recipient, and may contain information that is confidential, privileged and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are not permitted to read, disclose, reproduce, distribute, use or take any action in reliance upon this message and any attachments, and we request that you promptly notify the sender and immediately delete this message and any attachments as well as any copies thereof. Delivery of this message to an unintended recipient is not intended to waive any right or privilege. Newmark is neither qualified nor authorized to give legal or tax advice, and any such advice should be obtained from an appropriate, qualified professional advisor of your own choosing.

From: Geisreiter, Mark
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); [MandelmanStaff, \[BOS\]](#); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 2:47:07 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am a San Francisco resident and a member of the commercial real estate community.

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, I urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone.

I urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues and to ensure funds are efficiently spent. I urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Mark Geisreiter
Executive Managing Director

NEWMARK KNIGHT FRANK
One Sansome Street, Suite 4100
San Francisco, CA 94104
415.290.5797

Mark.Geisreiter@nmrk.com

RE LIC 00889721

NOTICE: This e-mail message and any attachments are intended solely for the use of the intended recipient, and may contain information that is confidential, privileged and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are not permitted to read, disclose, reproduce, distribute, use or take any action in reliance upon this message and any attachments, and we request that you promptly notify the sender and immediately delete this message and any attachments as well as any copies thereof. Delivery of this message to an unintended recipient is not intended to waive any right or privilege. Newmark is neither qualified nor authorized to give legal or tax advice, and any such advice should be obtained from an appropriate, qualified professional advisor of your own choosing.

From: Cracknell, Lisa
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); [MandelmanStaff, \[BOS\]](#); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 3:02:25 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Lisa Cracknell

VP Operations

Newmark Knight Frank

NOTICE: This e-mail message and any attachments are intended solely for the use of the intended recipient, and may contain information that is confidential, privileged and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are not permitted to read, disclose, reproduce, distribute, use or take any action in reliance upon this message and any attachments, and we request that you promptly notify the sender and immediately delete this message and any attachments as well as any copies thereof. Delivery of this message to an unintended recipient is not intended to waive any right or privilege. Newmark is neither qualified nor authorized to give legal or tax advice, and any such advice should be obtained from an appropriate, qualified professional advisor of your own choosing.

From: Zerrer, Cassidy
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); MandelmanStaff, J \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 3:08:17 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Cassidy Zerrer
Cell: 415.283.9910
RE License: #01779321

NOTICE: This e-mail message and any attachments are intended solely for the use of the intended recipient, and may contain information that is confidential, privileged and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are not permitted to read, disclose, reproduce, distribute, use or take any action in reliance upon this message and any attachments, and we request that you promptly notify the sender and immediately delete this message and any attachments as well as any copies thereof. Delivery of this message to an unintended recipient is not intended to waive any right or privilege. Newmark is neither qualified nor authorized to give legal or tax advice, and any such advice should be obtained from an appropriate, qualified professional advisor of your own choosing.

From: matthew.valentino@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of matt\_valentino
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 3:09:49 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
matt valentino
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: Potter, Hannah
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); [MandelmanStaff, \[BOS\]](#); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 3:14:29 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements

- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators

- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Hannah Potter

NOTICE: This e-mail message and any attachments are intended solely for the use of the intended recipient, and may contain information that is confidential, privileged and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are not permitted to read, disclose, reproduce, distribute, use or take any action in reliance upon this message and any attachments, and we request that you promptly notify the sender and immediately delete this message and any attachments as well as any copies thereof. Delivery of this message to an unintended recipient is not intended to waive any right or privilege. Newmark is neither qualified nor authorized to give legal or tax advice, and any such advice should be obtained from an appropriate, qualified professional advisor of your own choosing.

From: Shinners, Colin
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); [MandelmanStaff, \[BOS\]](#); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 3:33:37 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Colin Shinners

Managing Director

Vanbarton Group LLC

100 Montgomery Street, Suite 1760

San Francisco, CA 94104

O: 415.967.5731 | M: 415.689.9720

shinners@vanbartongroup.com

www.vanbartongroup.com

From: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
To: BOS-Supervisors; BOS-Legislative Aides
Cc: Calvillo, Angela \(BOS\); Somera, Alisa \(BOS\); Ng, Wilson \(BOS\); De Asis, Edward \(BOS\); Mchugh, Eileen \(BOS\); BOS Legislation, \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: FW: [Japantown Task Force] Addback Request Letter
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:06:45 PM
Attachments: 23.6.21 JTF Peace Plaza Construction Impact Funding Request.pdf

---

Hello,

Please see below and attached for communication from Dr. Emily Murase regarding funding for Peace Plaza.

File No. 230644 - Budget and Appropriation Ordinance for Departments - FYs 2023-2024 and 2024-2025

Sincerely,

Joe Adkins
Office of the Clerk of the Board
San Francisco Board of Supervisors
1 Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett Place, Room 244
San Francisco, CA 94102
Phone: (415) 554-5184 | Fax: (415) 554-5163
board.of.supervisors@sfgov.org | www.sfbos.org

---

From: Emily Murase <emurase@japantowntaskforce.org>
Sent: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 12:45 PM
To: Peskin, Aaron (BOS) <aaron.peskin@sfgov.org>; Walton, Shamann (BOS) <shamann.walton@sfgov.org>; Preston, Dean (BOS) <dean.preston@sfgov.org>; Chan, Connie (BOS) <connie.chan@sfgov.org>; Safai, Ahsha (BOS) <ahsha.safai@sfgov.org>; Engardio, Joel (BOS) <joel.engardio@sfgov.org>; Ronen, Hillary <hillary.ronen@sfgov.org>; Melgar, Myrna (BOS) <myrna.melgar@sfgov.org>; Dorsey, Matt (BOS) <matt.dorsey@sfgov.org>; Stefani, Catherine (BOS) <catherine.stefani@sfgov.org>; Mandelman, Rafael (BOS) <rafael.mandelman@sfgov.org>
Cc: Board of Supervisors (BOS) <board.of.supervisors@sfgov.org>
Subject: [Japantown Task Force] Addback Request Letter

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Greetings Supervisors,

Attached please find my letter requesting a $121,000 addback in support of San Francisco Japantown merchants, residents, and visitors during the 18-month renovation of the Peace Plaza which I had submitted it to Supervisor Chan a month ago. I sincerely appreciate your consideration. See you at Public Comment day!

Emily

Emily M. Murase, PhD
ムラセ エミリー
Executive Director
Japantown Task Force, Inc.

1765 Sutter Street, 3rd Floor
San Francisco, CA 94115
www.japantowntaskforce.org
415.346.1239 (Office)

Via USPS, email

June 21, 2023

To the Members of the Board of Supervisors:

The Japantown Task Force, on behalf of the Japantown community, is seeking additional funding for construction mitigation measures during the approximate 1.5 year renovation period for the Peace Plaza. As you well know, the Peace Plaza is the heart of our community and we want to ensure that the construction site appears presentable and clean and the business operations of our local merchants are not adversely affected. In consultation with Recreation and Parks Department, Department of Public Works, the Office of Small Business, and Office of Economic and Workforce Development, we have determined that the following measures are not supported by these departments and are thus requesting addback funds to be directed to the following measures:

1. Creative Construction Fencing: $20,000 (Year 1 only)

Organize, manage, and oversee production of an art piece along the Post Street edge of the plaza. The art can be a printed vinyl banner to wrap the standard construction fence supplied by the general contractor, or contribute funds to a more substantial, painted plywood fence upon which a mural can be painted.

2. Part-time Community Ambassador: $46,000 (Years 1 and 2)

Hire a Community Ambassador to guide residents, visitors, seniors, and school groups to alternative open space, how to enter the East and West Malls, and act as a docent for the history of the plaza and current renovations. The Ambassador would provide staffing as follows: Mon-Thurs, 12N-5 pm, Fri - Sun, 12N-8 pm, $20/hours for 1 year (estimated 2,288 hours).

3. Construction Updates – Posters and Flyering: $9,000 (Year 1 only)

Post updates by way of posters and flyers to nearby businesses and residents. Funds will be used for translation, graphic design, printing and mounting of updates.

The proposed funding totals $121,000, less than 0.4% of the $33.5 million overall project cost. This funding will ensure that the construction impacts on local businesses, visitors, and residents will be minimized. Thank you for your valuable consideration.

Sincerely,

Emily M. Murase, PhD
Executive Director

From: Aja, Shannon
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); MandelmanStaff, I \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:27:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Shannon D. Aja
Executive Managing Director

NEWMARK KNIGHT FRANK

One Sansome Street, Floor 41
San Francisco, CA 94104
t 415-445-5105
m 415-218-6509
shannon.aja@nmrk.com

RE LIC #01350959

nmrk.com
Linkedin | Twitter | Facebook | Instagram

Check out our Tech Connect Newsletter

NOTICE: This e-mail message and any attachments are intended solely for the use of the intended recipient, and may contain information that is confidential, privileged and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are not permitted to read, disclose, reproduce, distribute, use or take any action in reliance upon this message and any attachments, and we request that you promptly notify the sender and immediately delete this message and any attachments as well as any copies thereof. Delivery of this message to an unintended recipient is not intended to waive any right or privilege. Newmark is neither qualified nor authorized to give legal or tax advice, and any such advice should be obtained from an appropriate, qualified professional advisor of your own choosing.

From: Spencer Sechler
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary
Cc: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\)
Subject: PLEASE SUPPORT Mayor's Proposed Powell Street Funding
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:30:09 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members:

I strongly urge you to support the revitalization of downtown San Francisco by approving Mayor Breed's proposed funding for Powell Street pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts. I am a citizen of San Francisco, and am employed in the City, and the revitalization of our downtown core, including Union Square, is of utmost importance.

We must recognize that downtown and the neighborhoods are all in this together! Downtown and Union Square provide the lion's share of tax revenue and economic activity for the City. It provides the majority of jobs, not just for highly paid office workers, but also for lower- and middle-income San Franciscans and people of color. If downtown does not come back strong, the City as a whole will absolutely suffer.

Powell Street, with its historic cable cars, is the gateway to San Francisco and to be honest, it is currently in pretty bad shape. I see this almost daily when I show visitors our City, work in downtown and Union Square, and also hear from my friends who ask me what is being done to shape these areas up.

We need your help to restore this corridor to its former iconic state. Please support and approve the Mayor's proposed funding for Powell Street's pedestrian improvements and tenant attraction efforts.

Thank you very much for your attention to this critical request, and for your leadership in jump starting our economic engine.

Spencer Sechler
spencersechler@gmail.com
415.798.7873
District 5 Citizen

From: renawade37@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rena Wade
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:49:24 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rena Wade
San Francisco, CA 94124

From: kyle@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kyle Olivo
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:53:48 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kyle Olivo
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: mwells1280@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mary Wells
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:53:48 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mary Wells
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: Celebrezze, Bruce
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); MandelmanStaff, JBOS; ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:03:35 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Bruce Celebrezze
2875 Jackson Street #5

If our account details change, we will notify these to you by letter, telephone or face-to-face and never by email.

This email message and any attachments may contain legally privileged and/or confidential information intended solely for the use of the individual or entity to whom it is addressed. If the reader of this message is not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any reading, dissemination, distribution or copying of this message or its attachments is strictly prohibited. If you have received this email message in error, please immediately notify us by telephone, fax or email and delete the message and all attachments thereto. Thank you. Clyde & Co US LLP is a Delaware limited liability law partnership affiliated with Clyde & Co LLP, a multinational partnership regulated by The Law Society of England and Wales.

Disclosure: To ensure compliance with requirements imposed by the IRS in Circular 230, we inform you that any tax advice contained in this communication (including any attachment that does not explicitly state otherwise) is not intended or written to be used, and cannot be used, for the purpose of avoiding penalties under the Internal Revenue Code or promoting, marketing or recommending to another party any transaction or matter addressed herein.

From: mccuibono@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Marshall Crutcher
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:12:27 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Marshall Crutcher
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: jmiller491@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jeff Miller
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:20:51 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jeff Miller
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: hulka@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Judith Hulka
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:23:35 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Judith Hulka
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: rkram1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rona Kram
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:43:12 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rona Kram
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: lstrawn264@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lisa Strawn
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:05:57 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lisa Strawn
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: Trainor, Danny
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); [MandelmanStaff, \[BOS\]](#); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:23:20 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Daniel Trainor

NOTICE: This e-mail message and any attachments are intended solely for the use of the intended recipient, and may contain information that is confidential, privileged and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are not permitted to read, disclose, reproduce, distribute, use or take any action in reliance upon this message and any attachments, and we request that you promptly notify the sender and immediately delete this message and any attachments as well as any copies thereof. Delivery of this message to an unintended recipient is not intended to waive any right or privilege. Newmark is neither qualified nor authorized to give legal or tax advice, and any such advice should be obtained from an appropriate, qualified professional advisor of your own choosing.

From: jwhaasesq@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of James Haas
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:34:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
James Haas
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: Kath Tsakalakis
To: Jalipa Brent \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Chan Connie \(BOS\); Mandelman Rafael \(BOS\)
Subject: Please Fund and Expand Gun Violence Restraining Order Program
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:58:52 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear members of the Budget and Appropriations Committee,

Gun Violence Restraining Orders (GVROs) are a common-sense civil court procedure to temporarily remove guns and ammunition from people in crisis who are a danger to themselves or others. Research shows that GVROs stop suicides and homicides including mass shootings (Source: Brady fact sheet, UC Davis Violence Prevention Research.)

Please support additional funding for the San Francisco City Attorney's Office to develop community outreach and training with schools, domestic violence service providers, and other organizations. Expanding the reach of GVROs beyond law enforcement is critical to saving lives.

San Francisco lags behind our peers in terms of the number of GVROs obtained per capita. SF obtained just 27 GVROs last year compared with San Diego (349) and Santa Clara (357). This huge gap reflects the need for more investment in San Francisco to keep our communities safe.

Many thanks for your efforts to prevent gun violence.

Sincerely,

Kath Tsakalakis

Mobile 415-636-2421

San Francisco Resident

Co-lead, Brady San Francisco Chapter

Co-chair, Brady NorCal Regional Leadership Council

From: stephenlambe@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Stephen Lambe
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:55:56 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Stephen Lambe
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: fredm04@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Fred Medick
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:01:13 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Fred Medick
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: Frank Vella
To: FRANK@FRANKVELLA.COM
Cc: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); marisa@unionsquarealliance.com; julie.taylor@colliers.com
Subject: Support for Powell Street Funding
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:27:02 PM
Attachments: image001.png
image002.png
image003.png
image005.png
image006.png
image007.png

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee Members,

I have been working in San Francisco and I service Commercial and Residential clients. San Francisco after the riots and Covid issue needs all the help it can get. In addition to the issues with Crime, homelessness and drugs what is the plan to get San Francisco back on track to being a world class city? Now, we are NOT anywhere near any plan as far as I am aware. People and businesses are staying away. We all know that. I believe that the response to Westfield leaving from our city officials did not address the real issues that are hammering away at the city. The excuse that the retail sector is hurting was weak. Westfield shows a 25% increase in all its locations except San Francisco which shows a 25% decline in sales. No wonder they are turning the property back to the lender. After that the theatre located in its building is leaving also. Not surprising. Who's next?

The proposal to fund Powell Street is very important. Please do not oppose this. Union Square is in dire need of help, as is so many other areas of the city. Union Square has been the core of shopping, tourism, and a great artery to so many places in the city – the financial district, SOMA, north Beach, China Town, etc. This may certainly not be the only thing that we need but it certainly is a huge part of the recovery that San Francisco needs.

With the exiting of so many important and well-known Retail businesses and corporations leaving San Francisco we must do everything possible to attract businesses, tourist, citizens, and employees back to San Francisco.

Please support this funding for Powell Street! Address the real issues! Listen and see what is happening to San Francisco. I feel that we will spiral further downward unless the city takes some drastic action right now.

Support the funding for Powell Street now!

Frank Vella

Frank Vella
Director San Mateo County
Association of Realtors
2019,2020,2021,2022, 2023

Frank Vella
Senior Sales & Leasing Associate

Direct 650.464.8062
Email frank@starboardcre.com

CA BRE# 01104977

Starboard
CRE
49 Powell Street, 4th Floor
San Francisco, CA 94102

starboardcre.com

SF HomeLife, Inc
1005 Terra Nova Blvd, Suite A
Pacifica CA 94044
SFHomelife.com

From: gregn@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Greg Novick
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:46:46 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Greg Novick
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: malawykar@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kara Malawy
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:29:40 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kara Malawy
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: szsingh@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sarika Singh
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:39:07 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sarika Singh
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: Dino Monteverde
To: Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); marisa@unionsquarealliance.com
Subject: Powell Street Funding Support
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:55:45 PM
Attachments: image001.png
image002.png
image003.png
image004.png
image005.png
image006.png

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Budget and Appropriations Committee members,

I was asked by my broker, Hans Hansson of Starboard Commercial Real Estate, to write for support of Powell Street funding. I read a short article on this initiative headed by Mayor London Breed here: <https://therealdeal.com/sanfrancisco/2023/05/17/sf-could-spend-6m-to-fill-empty-stores-near-cable-car-turnaround/> and the assumption is the money would be taken from social services.

As someone who immigrated and grew up as a child in the suburbs of South San Francisco, I never really knew downtown until I arrived back here in 2021 in search of opportunity as an adult coming from living in Japan. I think the problem addressed in the article and by this initiative is just a pebble thrown into a problem as big as an ocean. I honestly don't know how to address it as a society.

What I can do however, is at a personal level, give you the perspective from one person who has lived and is currently living in and working in the thick of it for the past two years.

What I see the city doing right

Providing social services. I am a recipient of a VASH voucher for veterans in transition. I won the lottery for the city's housing placement program. But right away, do we have to win a lottery in order to be afforded comfortable and safe living? Don't get me wrong it is the nicest place I have ever lived in, possibly too nice as it is much more space than I need. But how can you really enjoy and be grateful when right outside the steps of the new building, the George Apartments by Brookfield properties, when you have people right outside sleeping in a corner and urinating all over themselves. One night I heard a man crying out because he said he had no friend and was covered in filth. I talked to him and decided to come down and bring a sleeping bag so he could be warm and some juice so for that one moment in time, he could find comfort. How can I live in such a nice fancy million dollar building and yet there are people suffering in encampments on the same block tens of feet away? Drugs being dealt right in the same space?

Community Events and Revitalizing Pockets of Space. There are weekly community events, like the ones by Community Arts Stabilization Trust and Kapwa Gardens. I am Filipino American and run by these events since they happen every weekend. They had ube and matcha (an ode to the Filipino and Japanese community embedded in SF history) event one day and I thought it was awesome.

There was music and food and liveliness. But as soon as the weekend was over, drug dealing was back in place with syringes and feces covering the sidewalk. There is a glaring problem staring us in the face and yet people just walk by doing nothing about it or at least not addressing the root cause.

What I see the city doing wrong

There are police during events walking the areas around Union Square. I hosted some foreign exchange students from Japan and Korea since I took one class at SFSU. You can tell from their social media that they do enjoy being in San Francisco taking in the sights and enjoying the nightlife. I too, though wanting to only make money in the US and live and spend it in another country, will admit that I will always love the diversity, the food and the music here in the US. No other country I have been to, has the cultural impact that Americans do and the unique flavors in the country. Many of my Korean friends even say that the Korean food in LA is superior to Korean food in Seoul! Because of the brain drain from other countries, the best and brightest come to America to make it one of the most unique and greatest societies.

But San Francisco as a subset, just isn't doing enough. When you have million dollar buildings and stadiums yet people living in filth not in a concentrated area like downtown LA, people will not want to be here.

Why I want to leave as soon as I can

Honestly, if America doesn't change, I will be looking to move back to Japan as soon as possible. There are homeless people there and I have no problem with homeless people. I feel that if someone doesn't want to participate in society, that is a perfectly okay way to live. I'll give you an example. I was in Tokyo and walking around and found a person who seemed to be living on the street. I went into a store and bought them a bag of food. I was homeless and in transition at one point, I know what it feels like to be in need and not wanting to depend on others. Yet, I have been on food stamps before. I have been the recipient of societys graces. Yet this man, refused any food. It almost seemed as if he didn't want to be a burden. The homeless people in Japan are not suffering from drug use or perhaps a minority do suffer from mental illness. But they still keep their surroundings clean, packing their stuff in an organized manner and putting it up during the day. When I went to seek out mental services, they had adequate health care to address all my needs even as a low income worker. There was a hospital there housing many patients. They weren't out on the street.

Like I said, if San Francisco or wider society in America, doesn't address the root cause of the issues behind mental health, access to it, drug use and wealth inequality or the access to opportunity, it will only get worse and no one will want to live in the city. I think doing something about it is better than not and just sticking to the status quo. I strongly believe in what the Mayor is doing and I think it is honestly the right direction, although as my broker mentioned, only a small start. Again, I am in no means an expert but this is my perspective and perhaps is shared by many others.

Thank you for reading and your consideration. Please keep up the great work and fighting the good fight!

-

Dino Monteverde

Associate

Office 415.765.6900

Mobile 650.720.6995

Email dino@starboardcre.com

DRE# 01948432

Starboard CRE
Hotels & Hospitality Group
49 Powell Street, 4th Floor
San Francisco, CA 94102

starboardcre.com

From: Jill Korengold
To: Jalipa Brent \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Chan Connie \(BOS\); Mandelman Rafael \(BOS\)
Subject: Please Fund and Expand Gun Violence Restraining Order Program
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 10:24:47 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear members of the Budget and Appropriations Committee,

Gun Violence Restraining Orders (GVROs) are a common-sense civil court procedure to temporarily remove guns and ammunition from people in crisis who are a danger to themselves or others. Research shows that GVROs stop suicides and homicides including mass shootings (Source: Brady fact sheet, UC Davis Violence Prevention Research.)

Please support additional funding for the San Francisco City Attorney's Office to develop community outreach and training with schools, domestic violence service providers, and other organizations. Expanding the reach of GVROs beyond law enforcement is critical to saving lives.

San Francisco lags behind our peers in terms of the number of GVROs obtained per capita. SF obtained just 27 GVROs last year compared with San Diego (349) and Santa Clara (357). This huge gap reflects the need for more investment in San Francisco to keep our communities safe. Thank you.

Jill Korengold
Sunset District.

Sent from my iPhone

From: denise.donaldson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Denise Donaldson
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 11:54:10 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Denise Donaldson
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: carolynhuntgonzalez@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Carolyn Hunt Gonzalez
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 1:00:51 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Hunt Gonzalez
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: 1moongypsy@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of J.Guerrero
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:10:29 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
J. Guerrero
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: mermaidangela05@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Angela Schommer
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:27:43 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Angela Schommer
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: jdmreis@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jose Reis
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:47:17 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jose Reis
Berkeley, CA 94710

From: dayanamora2@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sol Mora
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 6:05:17 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sol Mora
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: kimiaklein@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kimiko Klein
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 7:25:47 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kimiko Klein
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: cheyneymcinerny@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Cheyney McInerny
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 7:27:37 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Cheyney McInerny
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: markt.stephenson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mark Stephenson
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 7:47:28 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mark Stephenson
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: Sandra Seibel
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Please Fund and Expand Gun Violence Restraining Order Program
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:24:26 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisor Jalipa, Budget and Appropriations Committee,

Gun Violence Restraining Orders (GVROs) are a common-sense civil court procedure to temporarily remove guns and ammunition from people in crisis who are a danger to themselves or others. Research shows that GVROs stop suicides and homicides including mass shootings (Source: Brady fact sheet, UC Davis Violence Prevention Research.)

Please support additional funding for the San Francisco City Attorney's Office to develop community outreach and training with schools, domestic violence service providers, and other organizations. Expanding the reach of GVROs beyond law enforcement is critical to saving lives.

San Francisco lags behind our peers in terms of the number of GVROs obtained per capita. SF obtained just 27 GVROs last year compared with San Diego (349) and Santa Clara (357). This huge gap reflects the need for more investment in San Francisco to keep our communities safe.
Sincerely,

Sandra D Seibel

From: mgt1313@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Marcus Thompson
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:32:46 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Marcus Thompson
San Francisco, CA 94129

From: Stacia Keisner
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); MandelmanStaff, J \(BOS\); ChanStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for economic recovery, shelters, and Downtown renewal
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:39:23 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

I am writing to support several critical budget items relating to economic recovery, homelessness, and Downtown renewal.

Specifically, we urge you to support:

- Increased flexibility to spend existing “Big Prop C” funds on more shelter beds, permanent housing, and problem-solving placements
- Extending the Downtown Welcome Ambassador Program to aid in safe and clean streets
- Adjusting “Baby Prop C” to temporarily suspend a double tax on subleases that will not reduce services for children and young educators
- The Office Attraction Tax Credit to help attract new businesses to fill vacant offices, support ground-floor businesses and delay the business tax increases on sectors impacted by the pandemic

These proposals are crucial to moving our city in the right direction by creating more shelter for those living on the street, supporting safe and clean streets, attracting new businesses to support economic recovery, and making Downtown an inviting, vibrant place for everyone. We now urge you to stay focused on solving these pressing issues. We need to make sure funds are efficiently spent so we can continue. We urge you to support the Mayor’s budget investments.

Sincerely,

Stacia Keisner

Vice President | Asset Management

The Swig Company

220 Montgomery Street, Suite 950

San Francisco, CA 94104

(415) 291-1143 | SwigCo.com

-
-

From: dahudiebiz@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Caylah Kastner
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:39:57 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Caylah Kastner
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: uskokovicsv@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Svetlana USKOKOVIC
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 9:05:12 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Svetlana USKOKOVIC
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: nerquinigo@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nicole Otero
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 9:06:57 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nicole Otero
Oakland, CA 94649

From: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
To: BOS-Supervisors; BOS-Legislative Aides
Cc: Calvillo, Angela \(BOS\); Somera, Alisa \(BOS\); Ng, Wilson \(BOS\); De Asis, Edward \(BOS\); Mchugh, Eileen \(BOS\); BOS Legislation, \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: 31 Letters regarding File Nos. 230644 and 230645
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 9:14:30 AM
Attachments: 31 Letters regarding File Nos. 230644 and 230645.pdf

---

Hello,

Please see attached for 31 letters regarding File Nos. 230644 and 230645.

File No. 230644 - Budget and Appropriation Ordinance for Departments - FYs 2023-2024 and 2024-2025

File No. 230645 - Annual Salary Ordinance - FYs 2023-2024 and 2024-2025

Sincerely,

Joe Adkins
Office of the Clerk of the Board
San Francisco Board of Supervisors
1 Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett Place, Room 244
San Francisco, CA 94102
Phone: (415) 554-5184 | Fax: (415) 554-5163
board.of.supervisors@sfgov.org | www.sfbos.org

From: nerquinigo@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nicole Otero
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 9:06:54 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nicole Otero
Oakland, CA 94649

From: uskokovicsv@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Svetlana USKOKOVIC
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 9:05:09 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Svetlana USKOKOVIC
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: dahudiebiz@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Caylah Kastner
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:40:02 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Caylah Kastner
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: mgt1313@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Marcus Thompson
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:32:49 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Marcus Thompson
San Francisco, CA 94129

From: markt.stephenson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mark Stephenson
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 7:47:28 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mark Stephenson
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: cheyneymcinerney@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Cheyney McInerney
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 7:27:42 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Cheyney McNerny
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: kimiaklein@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kimiko Klein
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 7:25:51 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kimiko Klein
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: dayanamora2@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sol Mora
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 6:05:21 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sol Mora
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: jdmreis@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jose Reis
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:47:17 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jose Reis
Berkeley, CA 94710

From: mermaidangela05@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Angela Schommer
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:27:42 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Angela Schommer
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: 1moongypsy@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of J.Guerrero
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:10:30 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
J. Guerrero
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: carolynhuntgonzalez@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Carolyn Hunt Gonzalez
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 1:00:54 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Hunt Gonzalez
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: denise.donaldson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Denise Donaldson
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 11:54:11 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Denise Donaldson
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: szsingh@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sarika Singh
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:39:00 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sarika Singh
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: malawykara@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kara Malawy
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:29:42 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kara Malawy
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: gregn@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Greg Novick
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:46:40 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Greg Novick
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: fredm04@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Fred Medick
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 8:01:28 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Fred Medick
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: stephenlambe@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Stephen Lambe
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 7:55:56 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Stephen Lambe
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: jwhaasesq@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of James Haas
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:34:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
James Haas
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: lstrawn264@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lisa Strawn
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 6:05:48 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lisa Strawn
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: rkram1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rona Kram
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:43:24 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rona Kram
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: hulka@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Judith Hulka
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:23:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Judith Hulka
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: jmiller491@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jeff Miller
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:20:55 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jeff Miller
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: mccuibono@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Marshall Crutcher
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 5:12:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Marshall Crutcher
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: kyle@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kyle Olivo
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:53:49 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kyle Olivo
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: mwells1280@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mary Wells
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:53:39 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mary Wells
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: renawade37@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rena Wade
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 4:49:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rena Wade
San Francisco, CA 94124

From: matthew.valentino@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of matt\_valentino
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 3:09:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
matt valentino
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: smahwal@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Sapna Mahwal
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:54:17 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Sapna Mahwal
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: agarwal\_p@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Pankaj Agarwal
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:53:44 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Pankaj Agarwal
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: shanecastro32@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Shane Saint
To: Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2023 9:48:37 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Shane Saint
San Francisco, CA 94140

From: Joe Wilson
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); asha.safai@sfgov.org; Ronen, Hillary
Cc: Hsieh, Frances \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: VOTE NO on the Allocation Plan - Protect Homeless Youth and Families!
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 10:10:11 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors -

My name is Joe Wilson, executive director of Hospitality House, urging you to VOTE NO on the proposed reallocation plan for Prop C. Hospitality House operates one of the City's oldest emergency shelters for single adults. Still, homeless youth and families must be our highest priority.

Protect homeless youth and families. Don't pit one group of needy residents against another. Respect the will of the voters. Invest more, arrest less.

VOTE NO on the allocation plan.

Thank you!
Joe Wilson

Joseph T. Wilson
Executive Director
415.749.2111
jwilson@hospitalityhouse.org
Pronouns: He/His/Him

"Fighting for the Soul of the City Since 1967"

HOSPITALITY HOUSE

290 Turk Street, San Francisco, CA 94102 |
(415) 749-2100 | fax: (415) 749-2136
www.hospitalityhouse.org | Facebook | Instagram |

Legal Notice: This message and any attachments are solely for the intended recipient and may contain confidential information. If you are not the intended recipient, any disclosure, copying, use or distribution of this message and any attachments is prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify the sender by reply e-mail and immediately and permanently delete this message and any attachments

From: Tiffany Jackson
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); asha.safai@sfgov.org; Ronen, Hillary; Hsieh, Frances \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\)
Subject: VOTE NO on the allocation plan!
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 10:23:47 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Board of Supervisors,

My name is Tiffany Jackson, Program Manager at Hospitality House's Employment Program.

I am writing to express my deep concern regarding the recent decision to reallocate funds from youth programs and direct them towards adult programs. As a member of our community, I strongly believe that it is essential to prioritize the needs of our youth and explore alternative funding solutions rather than taking away from one crucial group and giving to another.

Youth programs play a pivotal role in shaping the future of our community. They provide essential support, resources, and opportunities for our young citizens to grow, develop skills, and reach their full potential. By investing in youth programs, we invest in the well-being and prosperity of our community as a whole.

While I understand the need to address the needs of other deserving groups, it is crucial that we do not do so at the expense of our youth. I kindly request that the Board of Supervisors reconsider this decision and explore alternative funding sources for adult programs. By doing so, we can ensure that the interests of both the youth and other deserving groups are protected and supported.

Thank you for your time and attention to this matter. I look forward to seeing a positive response that reflects our collective commitment to the well-being and future of our youth

In solidarity,

Tiffany Jackson

Tiffany Jackson
Employment Program Manager

Hospitality House
Neighborhood Job Center
181 Sixth Street
San Francisco, CA 94103
(415) 369-3053
Employment Program
146 Leavenworth St.
San Francisco, CA 94102

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/HospitalityHouse>

Twitter: <https://twitter.com/HospitalityHous>

Flickr: https://www.flickr.com/cchh\_cap

Legal Notice: This message and any attachments are solely for the intended recipient and may contain confidential information. If you are not the intended recipient, any disclosure, copying, use or distribution of this message and any attachments is prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify sender by reply e-mail and immediately and permanently delete this message and any attachments.

From: Jamil Nasim
To: Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary
Cc: Hsieh, Frances \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); DPH-jwilson
Subject: VOTE NO on the Allocation Plan - Protect Homeless Youth and Families!
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 10:34:21 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

My name is Jamil Nasim, Program Manager for the Community Arts Program at Hospitality House, urging you to VOTE NO on the proposed reallocation plan for Prop C.

We strongly believe that it is not in the best interest of our community to pit one group of vulnerable residents against another. Instead, we should foster an environment that respects the will of the voters and ensures equitable support for all. Allocating resources towards homeless youth and families should be seen as an investment in their future, a step toward breaking the cycle of homelessness, and a demonstration of our compassion as a society. By voting NO on the allocation plan, you will help protect and uplift the most vulnerable members of our community—homeless youth and families who are desperate for a lifeline.

VOTE NO on the allocation plan.

Thank you!
Jamil Nasim

--

Jamil Nasim
Community Arts Program Manager
jnasim@hospitalityhouse.org
Pronouns: He/His/Him

From: lilli.alberga@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of LILLI ALBERGA
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 11:30:19 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
LILLI ALBERGA
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: Nicole Johnson
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); asha.safai@sfgov.org; Ronen, Hillary; Hsieh, Frances \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\)
Subject: VOTE NO on the Allocation Plan - Protect Homeless Youth and Families!
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 11:47:57 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors -

My name is Nicole Johnson, director of programs of Hospitality House, urging you to VOTE NO on the proposed reallocation plan for Prop C. Hospitality House operates one of the City's oldest emergency shelters for single adults. Still, homeless youth and families must be our highest priority.

Protect homeless youth and families. Don't pit one group of needy residents against another. Respect the will of the voters. Invest more, arrest less.

Protect Youth & Families, Respect the Will of the Voters - Stop The Raid on Prop C

VOTE NO on the allocation plan.

Nicole Johnson
Director of Programs
415.749.2132
njohnson@hospitalityhouse.org
Pronouns: She/Her

HOSPITALITY HOUSE
290 Turk Street, San Francisco, CA 94102 |
(415) 749-2100 | fax: (415) 749-2136
www.hospitalityhouse.org | Facebook | Twitter | Instagram | Flickr

Legal Notice: This message and any attachments are solely for the intended recipient and may contain confidential information. If you are not the intended recipient, any disclosure, copying, use or distribution of this message and any attachments is prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify the sender by reply e-mail and immediately and permanently delete this message and any attachments.

From: oliverjenna29@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jenna Oliver
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 12:04:35 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jenna Oliver
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: htimsm1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mitchell Smith
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 12:35:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mitchell Smith
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: rjakub@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rose Jakubaszek
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 1:16:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rose Jakubaszek
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: quigleym@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Margaret Quigley
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 2:00:49 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Margaret Quigley
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: Youcheng Kuang
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 2:13:07 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不现实的。我要求的是明显減少正在侵蚀我们城市的露天毒品销售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Youcheng Kuang
colinkuang99@gmail.com
166 Jerrold Ave
San Francisco, California 94124

From: Diwen Li
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: City Budget Public Comment: San Francisco Needs to Fund Solutions to End the Drug Crisis in This Year's Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 2:13:20 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees a failure by our elected officials to address the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic that is devastating our city. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priority of this year's budget cycle. In addition:

我是一名三藩市的居民。我親眼目睹著由於我們民選官員的失敗而造成以芬太尼為主的毒品濫用正在摧毀著我們的城市。毒品流行與三藩市面臨的所有問題有關,包括無家可歸、精神健康、公共安全和經濟活力。您必須把結束露天毒品市場和資助更多市政府引導的戒毒康復項目作為今年預算週期的主要優先事項。

為了確保持續的行動,我要求您在來年的預算中包括以下內容:

執法部門:地區檢察官和警察局必須共同努力,逮捕和起訴三藩市的毒販,並與州和聯邦執法部門協調,打擊將毒品帶入三藩市的販毒集團。

市政府資助的戒毒康復項目:成功戒毒必須是目標。市政府各部門需要跨職能開展工作以實現這一目標,以便讓吸毒者有機會過上健康的生活並減少對街頭毒品的需求。

我知道完全根除吸毒是不现实的。我要求的是明显減少正在侵蚀我们城市的露天毒品销售和毒品使用。三藩市應該是一個居民和遊客不受公開毒品市場影響的地方。

Sincerely,

Diwen Li
diwenli97@gmail.com
190 Cambridge st
San Francisco, California 94134

From: patricia.kimball@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Patricia Kimball
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 3:28:51 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Patricia Kimball
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: kobecaty@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Caty Kobe
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 3:55:07 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Caty Kobe
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: Spencer.sks1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Spencer S
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 3:59:03 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Spencer S
San Francisco, CA 94108

From: lwetter@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Laura DiPiano
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 4:04:43 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Laura DiPiano
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: floydsantiago@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Floyd Santiago
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 4:27:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Floyd Santiago
San Francisco, CA 94134

From: courtney.helland@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Courtney Helland
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 4:32:29 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Courtney Helland
San Francisco, CA 94112

From: marcus.e.stack@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Marcus Stack
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 4:48:04 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Marcus Stack
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: julianmunoz235@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Julian Munoz
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 4:52:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Julian Munoz
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: roberto.holly@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Holly Krack
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 4:53:29 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Holly Krack
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: galencitrine@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Georganne Ross
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:00:08 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Georganne Ross
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: bd1947@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Dick Warren
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:00:08 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Dick Warren
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: vsaluja@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Vishal Saluja
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:02:29 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Vishal Saluja
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: glider\_nog0h@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Lucie A. Ramsey
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:06:49 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Lucie A. Ramsey
Banning, CA 92220

From: christianblank86@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Christian Blank
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:42:39 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Christian Blank
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: dher88@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of David Hernandez
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:45:31 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
David Hernandez
San Francisco, CA 94158

From: Paul Sedita
To: Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); asha.safai@sfgov.org; Ronen, Hillary
Cc: Hsieh, Frances \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Please Vote NO on the Allocation Plan
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 5:52:33 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

My name is Paul Sedita and I'm the Deputy Director of Operations at Central City Hospitality House. Please vote NO on the proposed reallocation plan for Prop C. Hospitality House runs one of San Francisco's oldest shelters for single adults, but we believe homeless youth and families should be our highest priority.

Please protect homeless youth and families and vote no on the allocation plan.

Thank you.

Paul Sedita
Deputy Director of Operations
415.749.2116
psedita@hospitalityhouse.org
Pronoun: He/Him

HOSPITALITY HOUSE

290 Turk Street, San Francisco, CA 94102 |
(415) 749-2100 | fax: (415) 749-2136

www.hospitalityhouse.org | Facebook | Instagram | Flickr

Legal Notice: This message and any attachments are solely for the intended recipient and may contain confidential information. If you are not the intended recipient, any disclosure, copying, use or distribution of this message and any attachments is prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify the sender by reply e-mail and immediately and permanently delete this message and any attachments.

From: jessicahewson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jessica Hewson
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 6:06:51 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jessica Hewson
San Francisco, CA 94123

From: fenechkristen@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kristen Fenech
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 6:09:12 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kristen Fenech
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: tim@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Deven Sutcliffe
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 7:34:30 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Deven Sutcliffe
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: 2gelareh@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Gelareh Esfahlani
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:39:40 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Gelareh Esfahlani
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: 2gelareh@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Gelareh Esfahlani
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:40:56 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Gelareh Esfahlani
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: ahariri15@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Al Hariri
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:48:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Al Hariri
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: ynhariri9@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Yasmin Hariri
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:48:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Yasmin Hariri
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: maloos22@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kate Sanae
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:56:55 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kate Sanae
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: danric.jaime@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Danric Jaime
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 8:57:46 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Danric Jaime
San Francisco, CA 94124

From: dshapiro1411@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of David Shapiro
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 9:18:36 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
David Shapiro
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: efarrand@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Erica Farrand
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 9:50:34 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Erica Farrand
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: mjgoldblatt@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mike Goldblatt
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 9:51:26 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mike Goldblatt
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: pstanton1224@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Pat Stanton
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2023 11:01:57 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Pat Stanton
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: sabina28london@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Szabina Maczak
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 1:06:43 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Szabina Maczak
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: heidikrauelpatel@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Heidi Patel
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:38:43 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Heidi Patel
San Francisco, CA 94121

From: jerry.fulner@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jerry Fulner
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 4:02:06 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jerry Fulner
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: crismar222@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Marisol Durand
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 6:48:51 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Marisol Durand
South San Francisco, CA 94080

From: emilykrauss@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Emily Grossberg
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 6:51:41 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Emily Grossberg
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: dhernandez1071987@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Diego Hernandez
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 6:52:04 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Diego Hernandez
San Francisco, CA 94111

From: sixstringdreamco@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Aaron Rosenthal
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 7:03:49 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Aaron Rosenthal
Albany, CA 94706

From: maryofthymirth@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Amanda Tucker
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 7:05:48 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Amanda Tucker
Oakland, CA 94601

From: danicag0706@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Danica Gutierrez
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 7:13:39 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Danica Gutierrez
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: nporlas737@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Nelson Canonizado Porlas
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 7:23:04 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Nelson Canonizado Porlas
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: pierre.chambe@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Pierre Chambe
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 7:32:43 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Pierre Chambe
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: denia.kagayaki@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Denia Larks
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 7:34:08 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Denia Larks
Berkeley, CA 94703

From: litagent@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Cherie Fehrman
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 7:42:16 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Cherie Fehrman
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: tenzintsering@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Tenzin Tsering
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 7:44:50 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Tenzin Tsering
El Cerrito, CA 94530

From: arankaspar@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Aran Kaspar
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 8:00:08 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Aran Kaspar
Oakland, CA 94619

From: brandon.nuckelt@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Brandon Nuckelt
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 8:03:21 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Brandon Nuckelt
Oakland, CA 94601

From: rebecadpfr@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rebeca Rocha
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 8:10:44 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rebeca Rocha
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: gracembaird@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Grace Baird
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 8:28:18 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Grace Baird
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: pbrettschneider@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Phillip Brettschneider
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 8:38:22 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Phillip Brettschneider
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: Library Users Association
To: ChanStaff \(BOS\); DorseyStaff \(BOS\); EngardioStaff \(BOS\); MandelmanStaff \(BOS\); MelgarStaff \(BOS\); PeskinStaff \(BOS\); PrestonStaff \(BOS\); RonenStaff \(BOS\); SafaiStaff \(BOS\); StefaniStaff \(BOS\); Waltonstaff \(BOS\)
Cc: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); Board of Supervisors \(BOS\)
Subject: Fw: Repeat Message re Library Budget - Please See Attached Letter... Fw: Important - Today's Meeting - LIBRARY budget consideration
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 9:22:31 AM
Attachments: LUA-Letter-to-BudgetAndAppropriationsCmtee-ReLibraryHiddenServiceReductions-AndInequitableServiceDelivery--20230616.doc

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisor Staff:

Attached for your information is the letter we have sent regarding the Public Library budget to members of the Budget and Appropriations Committee that we think would be of interest to them as well as their staff and the staff of all Supervisors.

Thank you for your attention to this.

Sincerely,

Peter Warfield
Executive Director
Library Users Association
libraryusers2004 @ yahoo.com
P.O. Box 170544, San Francisco, CA. 94117-0544

----- Forwarded Message -----

From: Library Users Association <libraryusers2004@yahoo.com>
To: Connie Chan (SF BoS Supervisor) <connie.chan@sfgov.org>
Cc: Hillary Ronen <hillary.ronen@sfgov.org>; Rafael Mandelman <rafael.mandelman@sfgov.org>; Ahsha Safai (Supervisor BoS SF) <ahsha.safai@sfgov.org>; Walton Shamann (BOS) <shamann.walton@sfgov.org>
Sent: Friday, June 23, 2023 at 09:06:28 AM PDT
Subject: Repeat Message re Library Budget - Please See Attached Letter... Fw: Important - Today's Meeting - LIBRARY budget consideration

Connie Chan (SF BoS Supervisor) <connie.chan@sfgov.org>
Hillary Ronen <hillary.ronen@sfgov.org>, Rafael Mandelman <rafael.mandelman@sfgov.org>, Ahsha Safai (Supervisor BoS SF) <ahsha.safai@sfgov.org>, Walton Shamann (BOS) <shamann.walton@sfgov.org>

Dear Chair Connie Chan and Members of the Budget and Appropriations Committee:

Please as you consider the Library's budget question the Library's REDUCED EVENING HOURS at branches previously (pre-COVID) open until 9pm -- now open only until 8pm.

And please read the attached letter, outlining some of the ways that the Library provides services that INEQUITABLY REDUCE OR EIMINATE ACCESS for materials and programs -- disproportionately affecting most heavily the 'vulnerable' populations, among others -- including minorities, seniors, those not fluent in English, disabled. We sent this letter last week, but did not hear any such questions being asked at last week's meeting.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,,

Peter Warfield
Executive Director
Library Users Association
libraryusers2004 @ yahoo.com
P.O. Box 170544, San Francisco, CA. 94117-0544

----- Forwarded Message -----

From: Library Users Association <libraryusers2004@yahoo.com>

To: Connie Chan (SF BoS Supervisor) <connie.chan@sfgov.org>

Sent: Friday, June 16, 2023 at 11:21:04 AM PDT

Subject: Important - Today's Meeting - LIBRARY budget consideration

SUBJECT - IMPORTANT - Today's Meeting - LIBRARY budget consideration

Dear Members of the Budget and Appropriations Committee:

Please see attached letter regarding concerns related to today's meeting -- Library budget.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Peter Warfield
Executive Director
Library Users Association
libraryusers2004 @ yahoo.com
P.O. Box 170544, San Francisco, CA. 94117-0544

cc: brent.jalipa@sfgov.org, Board.of.Supervisors@sfgov.org

Library Users Association

P.O. Box 170544, San Francisco, CA 94117-0544

June 16, 2023

Budget and Appropriations Committee
Board of Supervisors
City Hall
San Francisco
via email brent.jalipa @ sfgov.org

Subject: LIBRARY Appropriation – First Library Appearance Today, June 16, 2023—Please Question Hidden Service Reductions and Easily-fixed Inequities in Service

Dear Members of the Budget and Appropriations Committee:

As you review the Library's presentation and appropriation today, please question their hidden reductions in evening open hours at every single branch that used to be open until 9pm – now 8pm – and other issues such as easily-fixed inequities in service.

Open Hours: The Library boasts of regaining 7-day service following COVID-19 closures, but does not mention that it has cut by one hour every single evening open hour at the majority of branches that previously stayed open until 9pm twice or three times per week.

The Library's own surveys show that evenings and weekends have been the public's most-requested additional hours.

Inequitable Service Provision: We know from surveys, such as the City's Digital Equity Strategic Plan, 2019-2024, that more than 100,000 residents did not have access to the internet from home, and that there is a lack of access – disproportionately more -- affecting Minorities, as well as lower-income, older, disabled, and others.

These groups have less – or no -- access to the Library's increasingly digital provision of books and materials as well as programs and services.

Books: More and more of the Library's budget is being spent on e-books that are often much more available than print; and increasingly titles are available ONLY via ebook. Demographic surveys show that Minorities are the least likely to have access to the internet from home. Some of the e-books require specialized equipment such as a Kindle reader that further restricts accessibility to those without the means to own the necessary gear. The Library does not provide Kindles and other technology necessary to access other tech gear such as CD and DVD players.

Programs: Almost 100% of programs available remotely, such as author talks, seminars, etc., do not have any publicity that is easily seen at a library location – and almost none of the publicity shows that an ordinary telephone, including an older landline, can be used to participate. Instead, the Zoom access requires an “RSVP” via computer, requires an email address, plus full name, and only when the library user receives the email is there any indication about telephone access.

Services: Access to the internet at the Library requires earphones/headphones – which the Library does not provide. That means it is not possible to get the sound portion of a meeting, such as Board of Supervisors, etc..

Access to the Library's DVDs (e.g. for movies) and CDs (audio recordings) requires having a player – which the library does not provide.

Other Resources: The recent publicity about the Library's removal of after-hours internet access (WiFi) at Eureka Valley/Harvey Milk branch library to target the homeless, but affecting all current and potential users both in the neighborhood and coming from elsewhere, indicates an unfortunate willingness to remove service that every other location provides. (See Mission Local and KQED stories.)

This was done in response to complaints and clearly to negatively target homeless people.

Other libraries around the country have resisted political efforts to remove books; our library acceded to such efforts and removed a service.

Library administration did this despite their own studies showing no correlation between WiFi provision and crime – and their study showed more than 500 'unique' users used after-hours WiFi at the branch in a 6-week test period during which WiFi was only on during three alternate weeks.

These are some of the ways the Library inequitably disadvantages minorities and other actual and potential library users.

It is far from the “Free and equal access” that the Library's motto promises.

Please do question the Library today about these growing inequities.

Thank you for your attention to this.

Sincerely yours,

Peter Warfield
Executive Director
Library Users Association
Libraryusers2004 @ yahoo.com

From: annie.weir1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Annie Weir
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 9:26:32 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Annie Weir
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: philliptobias252@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Geoffrey Tobias
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 9:47:13 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Geoffrey Tobias
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: iluvpippi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kuangching Cheng
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 10:07:13 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kuangching Cheng
San Francisco, CA 94115

From: joanna.e.ong@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Joanna Ong
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 10:48:55 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Joanna Ong
Berkeley, CA 94702

From: send2jason@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jason Li
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 10:49:15 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jason Li
San Francisco, CA 94122

From: jlbrooks2626@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jose Ormeno
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 11:04:57 AM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jose Ormeno
Santa Rosa, CA 95407

From: Cat H
To: Jalipa Brent \(BOS\); Walton Shamann \(BOS\); Ronen Hillary; Safai Ahsha \(BOS\); Chan Connie \(BOS\); Mandelman Rafael \(BOS\)
Subject: Gun Violence Prevention Ordinance
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 12:19:39 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear members of the Budget and Appropriations Committee:

I am a SF Voter and Constituent of Connie Chan's district.

Please fully fund the request for Gun Violence Prevention Ordinance work at the City Attorney's office.

Gun Violence Restraining Orders are a common-sense civil tool to take guns away from people who pose a threat to themselves and/or others.

Additional funding for this important work will allow the City Attorney's Office to develop community outreach and training with schools, domestic violence service providers, and other organizations.

Although SF has strong gun laws, in a country with more guns than there are human beings, we know that many of these guns are in SF and some in the hands of people who are mentally ill, at-risk of suicide, or likely to harm others.

With many leaders in Congress and the court system advancing a radical "guns for everyone, everywhere" agenda, we need to make sure that SF is using every single tool in the legal toolbox to keep our people safe and keep violence out of our city, and it's crucial that we give GVROs the funding it requires.

Thank you

Cathy Hong

Richmond District SF Voter

From: Maile Hartsook
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: I support funding for the San Francisco-Marín Food Bank
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 12:41:06 PM
Attachments: Hartsook Support of Food Bank.pdf

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Clerk Jalipa and Supervisor Dean Preston,

Attached is a letter of support to reject the majoy's proposal and fully fund the SF-Marín Food Bank. I am a resident of District 5.

Thank you,
Maile Hartsook
707-694-6129

SF-MARIN
FOOD BANK

Dear Supervisor Dean Preston,
My name is Maile Hartsook and I live in District 5. I lead supply chain sustainability for a major corporation, and serve on the young Professional Council of the SF Marin Food Bank. I volunteer at the Food Bank to help fill a gap in hunger, because there is already a gap in SF residents who are food secure. This is important to me because I received SNAP benefits for nearly three years as a student from a low income family. I know firsthand how important food banks and food support are to function as a member of society. When you're hungry, you can't learn. You can't work. You can't be part of society. Food is a basic human right. Residents in San Francisco should not have to make difficult choices around basic human rights: whether to buy food or medicine? The SF Marin Food Bank ensures residents don't have to make those choices. 5,000+ households receive food every week, which is a critical lifeline for residents facing food insecurity. When funding to provide these services is cut, people go hungry. Children go to school hungry. People go to work hungry. And parents ask themselves: do I eat or do my children eat? It is inexcusable that in San Francisco we stand by as our fellow residents make these decisions. We must fully fund the Food Bank to build a critical ~~lifeline~~ lifeline of access to food. Without, our social fabric will defray and suffering will result. Please reject the Mayor's proposal and fully fund the Food Bank.

Thank you, Maile Hartsook

From: mebinchi1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of mebinchi fluker
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 1:49:37 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
mebinchi fluker
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: warrenfourie@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Warren Fourie
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:10:23 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Warren Fourie
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: dougneilson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Doug Neilson
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:12:48 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Doug Neilson
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: debbilerman@sfhns.org
To: Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Stefani, Catherine \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Preston, Dean \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Engardio, Joel \(BOS\); Dorsey, Matt \(BOS\); Melgar, Myrna \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\)
Cc: Elsbernd, Sean \(MYR\); Hsieh, Frances \(BOS\); Groth, Kelly \(BOS\); Yu, Angelina \(BOS\); Burke, Robyn \(BOS\); Gurewitz, Ben \(BOS\); Donovan, Dominica \(BOS\); Rosas, Lorenzo \(BOS\); Del Rosario, Mick \(BOS\); Logan, Sam \(BOS\); Angulo, Sunny \(BOS\); Yan, Calvin \(BOS\); Souza, Sarah \(BOS\); Hsu, Melody \(BOS\); Bell, Tita \(BOS\); Lam, Kit \(BOS\); Timony, Simon \(BOS\); Goldberg, Jonathan \(BOS\); Smeallie, Kyle \(BOS\); Kilgore, Preston \(BOS\); Hernandez, Melissa G \(BOS\); Bolen, Jennifer M.\(BOS\); Tam, Madison \(BOS\); Alfaro, Leo \(HOM\); Dahl, Bryan \(BOS\); Ebadi, Mahanaz \(BOS\); Fieber, Jennifer \(BOS\); Low, Jen \(BOS\); Heiken, Emma \(BOS\); Farrah, Michael \(BOS\); Thornhill, Jackie \(BOS\); Hajee, Zahra \(BOS\); Green, Ross \(BOS\); Thongsavat, Adam \(BOS\); Lerma, Santiago \(BOS\); Ferrigno, Jennifer \(BOS\); Prager, Jackie \(BOS\); Herrera, Ana \(BOS\); Gee, Natalie \(BOS\); Gallardo, Tracy \(BOS\); Burch, Percy \(BOS\); Lopez-Weaver, Lindsey \(BOS\); Barnes, Bill \(BOS\); Chung, Lauren \(BOS\); Buckley, Jeff \(BOS\); Carrillo, Lila \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Background information: Nonprofit cost of doing business increase in the City budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:31:25 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

NONPROFIT COST OF DOING BUSINESS AND WAGE EQUITY

San Francisco Human Services Network

FY2023-25 City Budget Ask

June 23, 2023

Original budget request: Increase front-line worker wages and sustain nonprofit health and human services by addressing inflationary wage and cost pressures through a 7.75% nonprofit cost-of-doing-business increase (CODB) in year one ($57 million) and a 5% increase in year two ($93 million).

Funded: Mayor Breed's proposed budget includes a 3% CODB increase for all nonprofit contracts in year one ($27 million) and an additional 1% on contracts related to health and homelessness ($5.5 million). The dollar amount is based on updated figures calculating the cost of the CODB as $9 million per 1% increase. The Mayor's budget also includes increases and some funding for the Minimum Compensation Ordinance (MCO) from the current $17.90/hour to $18.93 in FY23-24 ($3.3 million), $20.25 in FY24-25 ($7.6 million), and two steps to $23 in FY25-26 ($14.1 million).

Updated budget request: Address inflationary wage and cost pressures through an additional 2% CODB increase in FY23-24 ($18 million in FY23-24 and $18 million in FY24-25). This would provide a total increase of 5% for health and homelessness contracts and 4% on other nonprofit contracts.

This request focuses on the direct connections between underfunded nonprofit contracts, inability to recruit workers, and the quality and level of services. Nonprofits continue to face an ongoing labor shortage and high inflation that threaten the ability to achieve outcomes that address vital City priorities. The cost-of-doing-business increase on nonprofit contracts provides wage increases and adjusts for inflation on programmatic, wage and benefit, and operating costs such as food for clients, health insurance, rent, utilities, gas and administration. A multi-year investment in our sector is crucial to ensure the sustainability of our organizations and services and to address the staff recruitment and retention crisis, wage equity, and wage disparity with comparable City workers.

While we acknowledge that the City is facing a deficit in the upcoming budget, we base the request for an additional 2% increase on several principles:

- Inflation: As of February 2023, San Francisco CPI has increased by 4.2% over the prior 12 months. Any increase that fails to keep up with inflation is effectively a funding cut.
- Wage parity: Under current labor MOUs, San Francisco will provide comparable City workers with a 4.75% COLA in FY23-24. A smaller nonprofit increase would widen the disparity and exacerbate nonprofit hiring and retention challenges. Even if the CODB percentage is equivalent to the City labor increase, the existing disparity will widen in actual dollars because the City pay scale is significantly higher.
- Living wage: The MCO rate will increase by 5.75% in FY23-24 and 7% in FY24-25. While the MCO funding will be helpful to nonprofits with the lowest paid workers, the CODB is far from sufficient to address the associated wage compression impacts, and nonprofits must also provide equitable raises to their noncontract employees. This will leave no funds for other rising costs and strain nonprofit budgets, leading to possible service cuts and overall financial challenges.
- Equity: A multi-year investment above CPI is necessary to address the impacts of historical underfunding and wage constraints, and to reduce the wage parity gap with comparable City employees.
  - Nonprofit frontline workers, who serve the most vulnerable City residents – including prior to and throughout the COVID crisis -- are underpaid and can no longer afford to live in San Francisco. They need and deserve better.
  - BIPOC workers are overrepresented in the lowest wage jobs, and the CODB investment provides a mechanism to acknowledge and decrease these inequitable impacts.

Debbi Lerman, Director
San Francisco Human Services Network
191 Golden Gate Ave.
San Francisco, CA 94102
(415) 668-0444 (office)
(415) 846-4637 (cell)
debbilerman@sfn.org

From: thl001@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Thomas Lee
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:35:05 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Thomas Lee
San Francisco, CA 94127

From: limwallis@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Wallis Lim
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:36:57 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Wallis Lim
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: 777tenn@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jennifer Cood
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:37:47 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Cood
San Francisco, CA 94107

From: jhinsf@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Jim and Tina Hirsch
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:38:30 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Jim and Tina Hirsch
San Francisco, CA 94108

From: alanbillingsley215@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Alan Billingsley
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:39:48 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Alan Billingsley
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: anthony.tabaniag@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Anthony Tabaniag
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:41:53 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Anthony Tabaniag
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: ammala@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Ammala Block
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:48:13 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Ammala Block
San Francisco, CA 94109

From: cybele.dolan@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Cybele Dolan
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:53:12 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Cybele Dolan
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: robabraham1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rob Abraham
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:56:58 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rob Abraham
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: feliza20@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Felix Sung
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:58:37 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Felix Sung
San Francisco, CA 94132

From: dmorse57@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Dan Morse
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:59:07 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Dan Morse
Menlo Park, CA 94025

From: ldeleonsung@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of LIZA DE LEON
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 2:59:50 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
LIZA DE LEON
San Francisco, CA 94112

From: darryl@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Darryl Glass
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:02:41 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Darryl Glass
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: minaazimiii@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Mina Mirazimi
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:02:55 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Mina Mirazimi
San Francisco, CA 94105

From: aaron@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Aaron Chan
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:02:57 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Aaron Chan
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: kmylett@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Kathleen Mylett
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:06:08 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Mylett
San Francisco, CA 94116

From: davidlombardi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of David Lombardi
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:11:16 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
David Lombardi
San Francisco, CA 94133

From: parman.dsc@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Michael Parman
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:18:54 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Michael Parman
San Francisco, CA 94110

From: aaliyah@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Aaliyah Yusuf
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:23:12 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Aaliyah Yusuf
San Francisco, CA 94102

From: Marnie Regen
To: Peskin, Aaron \(BOS\); Safai, Ahsha \(BOS\); Stefani, Catherine \(BOS\); Chan, Connie \(BOS\); Preston, Dean \(BOS\); Ronen, Hillary; Engardio, Joel \(BOS\); Dorsey, Matt \(BOS\); Melgar, Myrna \(BOS\); Mandelman, Rafael \(BOS\); Walton, Shamann \(BOS\)
Cc: Hsieh, Frances \(BOS\); Groth, Kelly \(BOS\); Yu, Angelina \(BOS\); Burke, Robyn \(BOS\); Gurewitz, Ben \(BOS\); Donovan, Dominica \(BOS\); Rosas, Lorenzo \(BOS\); Del Rosario, Mick \(BOS\); Logan, Sam \(BOS\); Angulo, Sunny \(BOS\); Yan, Calvin \(BOS\); Souza, Sarah \(BOS\); Hsu, Melody \(BOS\); Bell, Tita \(BOS\); Lam, Kit \(BOS\); Timony, Simon \(BOS\); Goldberg, Jonathan \(BOS\); Smeallie, Kyle \(BOS\); Kilgore, Preston \(BOS\); Hernandez, Melissa G \(BOS\); Bolen, Jennifer M.\(BOS\); Tam, Madison \(BOS\); Alfaro, Leo \(HOM\); Dahl, Bryan \(BOS\); Ebadi, Mahanaz \(BOS\); Fieber, Jennifer \(BOS\); Low, Jen \(BOS\); Heiken, Emma \(BOS\); Farrah, Michael \(BOS\); Thornhill, Jackie \(BOS\); Hajee, Zahra \(BOS\); Green, Ross \(BOS\); Thongsavat, Adam \(BOS\); Lerma, Santiago \(BOS\); Ferrigno, Jennifer \(BOS\); Prager, Jackie \(BOS\); Herrera, Ana \(BOS\); Gee, Natalie \(BOS\); Gallardo, Tracy \(BOS\); Burch, Percy \(BOS\); Lopez-Weaver, Lindsey \(BOS\); Barnes, Bill \(BOS\); Chung, Lauren \(BOS\); Buckley, Jeff \(BOS\); Carrillo, Lila \(BOS\); Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\); DPH-jwilson; Jennifer Friedenbach
Subject: HESPA Update
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:33:02 PM
Attachments: image001.png
HESPA Spreadsheet FY 23-24 24-5 - 2023\_24.pdf
HESPA Spreadsheet FY 23-24 24-5 - 2024-25.pdf
HESPA Spreadsheet FY 23-24 24-5 - Hespera Summary 23-24 24-25.pdf
HESPA Narrative 2023\_24.pdf

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Supervisors,

This year's HESPA proposal reflects some of the best thinking in our local field regarding strategic investments to yield significant results in the short term and continue to lay the groundwork for the structural investments that are needed. The City must renew its efforts to build the community-based workforce infrastructure needed to take full advantage of increased housing and service investments, to continue to bolster - not abandon - the foundation made by COVID-related investments at the federal and state levels.

This year, we can build on past successes through an infusion of $41,191,793 for FY 2023-24 and $41,510,073 in FY 2024-25 for new baseline funding to house 484 households and stabilize an additional 1,555 households, provide new and improved emergency services for over 3,415 households, improve behavioral health of 3,010 individuals and support job services for 445 unhoused community members and families - *reaching nearly 9,000 households! This budget proposal attempts to both prevent homelessness and create exits out of homelessness, while ensuring an adequate emergency, behavioral health, and employment services system for those forced to remain on the streets.

This proposal is the result of a careful, data-driven analysis to assess our current housing and homeless system, identify service gaps, and tap into the experience and creativity of our providers to determine the most cost-effective solutions. Please see Attachment 1 for a detailed budget for our proposal.

- Housing Subsidies: Fund more than 484 new household subsidies to unhoused black and undocumented families, women, people with HIV/AIDS, youth, domestic violence survivors to allow San Franciscans to move out of homelessness or retain permanent housing during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- Emergency Services: Improve quality of shelters by increasing staff training and adding case management for Domestic Violence survivors in shelter and expand temporary hotel options. The proposal also adds capacity to drop-in centers serving youth and families and improves food security for 1,000 transition-age youth (TAY).
- Prevention: Provide emergency rental assistance to 1,380 households per year to prevent eviction and creates a pilot guaranteed income program for 75 black and brown families and adds prevention services for 75 youth.
- Behavioral Health: Fund community-based organizations to offer integrated, culturally competent behavioral health services in their settings (shelters, navigation centers, drop-in centers) to 3,010 families, adults, and youth. This includes a special focus on drop-in centers by building up behavioral health hubs in existing drop-in centers.
- Employment: Fund innovative earn-as-you-learn job training pool to strengthen our workforce training capacity, add housing specialists to job programs, and augment paid employment prep for homeless youth impacting 445 individuals in all.

The Mayor's Budget included a few of the HESPA asks, funded with Prop C Our City Our Home dollars including:

~Funding for clinical services for Transitional Aged Youth at the Youth Navigation Center

~Funding for hotel vouchers for homeless families and pregnant people

~Partial funding for Flex Pool subsidies for families

Attached please find a chart summarizing what the Mayor funded off our list, our narrative and our spreadsheets outlining the budgets in year 1 and 2.

Thank you for your consideration. We recognize that while it is a tough budget year, homelessness is a top priority for voters. We need them to be prioritized.

Marnie Regen and Joe Wilson,

Co-Chairs, HESPA

Marnie Regen
she/her pronouns
Division Director, Government Relations
Larkin Street Youth Services
134 Golden Gate Avenue
San Francisco CA 94109
Cell (415) 579-1780
Office (415) 673-0911 x310
larkinstreetyouth.org

YOUTH SERVICES

Larkin Street creates a continuum of services that inspires youth to move beyond the street. We nurture potential, promote dignity, and support bold steps by all. We live and work on the unceded ancestral homeland of the Ramaytush Ohlone peoples who are the original inhabitants of the San Francisco Peninsula. We acknowledge that colonization continues to harm indigenous people and while a land acknowledgement is a first step in honoring the resiliency and resistance of the Ramaytush Ohlone people throughout the San Francisco Bay Area, our equity efforts cannot stop there. To learn about returning land to indigenous peoples please visit LANDBACK and Sogorea Te' Land Trust.

The information in this email and in any attachments is confidential and may be legally privileged. If you are not the intended recipient, please destroy this message, delete any copies held on your systems and notify the sender immediately. If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you should not retain, copy, or use this email for any purpose, nor disclose all or any part of its content to any other person. Thank you.

From: rwolfgram@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Rick Wolfgram
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:33:38 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Rick Wolfgram
San Francisco, CA 94118

From: jaystreets@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of JAY STREETS
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:33:40 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
JAY STREETS
San Francisco, CA 94117

From: thomas-duggan@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Thomas Duggan
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:33:59 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Thomas Duggan
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: mariannp3666@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of Angus Pera
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:37:37 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

The Mayor and Board of Supervisors must ensure the budget reflects an investment in closing the gaps San Francisco has for delivering true treatment on demand for recovery services. Mayor Breed's proposed budget funds a number of our community's demands, like expanding completely drug-free therapeutic teaching communities for justice involved people, expanding the capacity of the Billie Holiday Center to serve more justice involved people, funding 50 new dual diagnosis treatment beds, and making it easier for recovery service providers to offer competitive jobs.

But true treatment on demand enables people to recover from substance use disorder. This means that anyone who wants treatment gets it immediately, with no one forced to wait on the street or in jail. San Francisco needs to deliver a continuum of care, from harm reduction as the baseline to full recovery as the goal—I'm not confident that the proposed budget investments make the right choices to fully close the current gaps.

Funding must be provided to bolster intake center capacity. The current system for getting those who request treatment into recovery programs is a patchwork of hotlines and street response teams that result in people waiting for days. While it's encouraging to see that there's a new stabilization center planned for 2024, it must have enough beds and a guarantee that people can enter it once they request treatment, then efficiently directed to the appropriate in-patient treatment program. We also need more significant investments in in-patient treatment programs that have recovery as the goal.

Finally, I'm concerned that spending $18.9 million in opioid settlement funds for three Wellness Hubs isn't the best use of this money, as Wellness Hubs are intended to provide overdose prevention, overdose reversals, and safe consumption sites. Overdose prevention and reversals are critical, but other city services already offer these more efficiently. This money should be directed to services like SoMa RISE that will help people get healthy and sheltered—sober hotels, intake centers, and more drug treatment beds.

Again, I'm grateful to Mayor London Breed for taking steps to end San Francisco's drug crisis with this proposed budget. I know completely eradicating drug use is unrealistic. But City Hall has the opportunity to improve the lives of all San Franciscans by slowing the rate of overdoses as well as reducing the open-air drug sales and drug use that are eroding our city. Ensure this happens by fully funding these priorities in the next budget.

Sincerely,
Angus Pera
San Francisco, CA 94114

From: lalena.goard@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of lalena goard
To: Jalipa, Brent \(BOS\)
Subject: Board File # 230644 & 230645 Public Comment: Tell The Mayor and Board of Supervisors to Keep Public Safety and Correctly Prioritize Recovery in the Next Budget
Date: Friday, June 23, 2023 3:44:10 PM

---

This message is from outside the City email system. Do not open links or attachments from untrusted sources.

Dear Brent Jalipa,

I'm a San Francisco resident who sees the fentanyl-fueled drug epidemic as the main issue our elected leaders need to solve. This crisis is linked to all of the problems San Francisco faces, including homelessness, mental health, public safety, and economic vitality. You must make ending open-air drug markets and funding more city-sponsored recovery programs the main priorities of this year's budget.

It's encouraging to see elected officials at the local, state, and federal level call for coordination to close drug markets in San Francisco. To ensure these calls for action are effective, there must be a senior official appointed by the Mayor who is responsible for and empowered to bring all necessary resources together to permanently disrupt drug markets. I look forward to seeing a robust strategy and plan to disrupt drug dealing in our community.

The Board of Supervisors must ensure that Mayor Breed's public safety investments remain in the final budget. The proposed budget funds our community's law enforcement requests, and I'm grateful for the Mayor's responsiveness to our community's calls for action. Funding to meet the recommended number of sworn SFPD officers, adding staffing aides to allow officers to answer high-priority calls, and investment in personnel training and narcotics equipment will make a real difference in law enforcement's efforts to close San Francisco's open-air drug markets.

