Statement of Qualifications for Theshia Naidoo

I am an attorney with the Drug Policy Alliance (DPA), Office of Legal Affairs. For over seven years, I have worked on a wide range of areas throughout criminal justice and drug policy reform, including litigation, legislative work, technical assistance, and public education. As an attorney at DPA, I advocate for policies aimed at minimizing the harms of drug abuse and redirecting resources away from inefficient, ineffective, and unnecessarily punitive practices. My work is focused on promoting and implementing evidence based alternatives to policies that arrest, incarcerate, disenfranchise, and otherwise harm millions of nonviolent people.

My direct experience working on sentencing reform throughout the criminal justice system, from pre-arrest through post-conviction, includes:

- Evaluating California's drug sentences and serving as the lead DPA attorney on a legislative campaign, initiated by State Senator Mark Leno, to reduce penalties and reclassify drug possession offenses from felonies to misdemeanors;
- Working with the Dignity in Schools Campaign to evaluate school policies that contribute to school drop-out rates and fuel the school-to-prison pipeline. I also assisted with drafting a Model School Code to implement best practices based on fundamental human rights;
- Evaluating and proposing amendments to California's policies that contributed to the prison overcrowding crisis and being one of the primary drafters of Proposition 5, the Nonviolent Offender Rehabilitation Act, which was on the California ballot in 2008; and
- Working on Proposition 36 implementation issues, including serving as co-counsel in a lawsuit that successfully challenged legislative amendments to Prop 36 that were contrary to sound practices and would have allowed counties to incarcerate Prop 36 participants.

In addition to California, I have experience evaluating drug sentencing laws in a number of other states. I have worked on legislative proposals to promote alternatives to incarceration and recommended amendments to existing laws to implement front-end sentencing reforms with the aim of reducing recidivism. I have been actively involved in the legislative process and have worked on bills that seek to roll back the excesses of the drug war, block new, harmful initiatives, and promote sensible drug policy reforms. Further, I am familiar with the research on evidence-based practices, understand theories about sentencing reform and have collaborated with experts and organizations who are documenting the impact of current sentencing practices and developing and evaluating new practices.

About the Drug Policy Alliance

The Drug Policy Alliance (“DPA”) is a major advocate for sentencing reform in California, having sponsored three measures on the California ballot since 1996 (Prop 215, Prop 36 and Prop 5). In particular, our organization has significant alternative sentencing expertise. Under Prop 36, which passed with 61% of the vote in 2000, over 200,000 drug possession offenders have already been diverted from prison to alternative sentencing in California (according to researchers at the University of California at Los Angeles).

DPA’s Office of Legal Affairs, based in Berkeley, pursues these goals nationwide through impact litigation, legislative drafting for local and state bodies, and advocacy on behalf of public health interventions that address the problems associated with substance abuse at the individual, family and community levels.

Our office works with our state-based and Washington, DC offices on legislation related to a variety of issues, including but not limited to: reforming sentencing laws, including advocating for treatment instead of incarceration; reduction of suspicion-less drug testing and other pervasive surveillance technologies; eligibility for public benefits for individuals with drug problems or prior drug convictions; access to substance abuse treatment, including narcotic replacement therapies; provision of harm reduction services, including access to sterile syringes and overdose prevention programs; lawful use and supply of medical marijuana; adequate treatment of severe and chronic pain; combating the criminalization of pregnant substance abusers; and addressing racial disparities in drug laws and sentencing.

In addition to the Office of Legal Affairs, DPA maintains six other offices: in San Francisco and Los Angeles, California; New Mexico; New Jersey; New York; and Washington, DC.

Supplemental Sheet to Application of Allen Hopper for Appointment to

San Francisco Sentencing Commission

Qualifications, business and professional experience:

I am an attorney and the Criminal Justice and Drug Policy Director of the ACLU of Northern California. I work in the San Francisco office of the ACLU to develop and implement strategies to reform California's criminal justice system and drug policies. Specific areas of focus and expertise include sentencing reform, down-sizing California jails and prisons, drug law enforcement, medical marijuana implementation issues and broader marijuana law reform. I have co-authored two major ACLU reports on criminal justice realignment, available on our website at www.aclunc.org/realignment. I have attended and/or presented at numerous conferences and panels concerning criminal justice realignment since its inception last year. I have studied sentencing reform efforts from around the country and am in regular communication with ACLU offices in other states throughout the country about criminal justice and sentencing reform developments and issues. Prior to joining to the staff of the California ACLU, I was the Litigation Director of the National ACLU's Drug Law Reform Project, where I coordinated the ACLU's drug policy-related litigation and litigated cases across the nation as part of an overall strategy to combine impact litigation with policy and legislative advocacy, public education, media and grassroots-and-tops organizing to transform public understanding of, and government response to, drug use and drug policies. I published an analysis of the continued validity of state medical marijuana laws after the U.S. Supreme Court's 2005 decision in Gonzales v. Raich, and a similar analysis of the constitutional validity of California's 2010 marijuana legalization voter initiative, Proposition 19. I have been quoted extensively in the state and national news media on criminal justice realignment issues and numerous marijuana law reform topics. I testified as a constitutional law expert in October, 2009 before the California State Assembly Public Safety Committee during its hearings on the legalization of marijuana.

I received my undergraduate degree in 1988 from New College of Florida, the independent public honors college for the state of Florida, and my law degree from the University of California, Davis, School of Law in 1992, where I was the recipient of the Martin Luther King, Jr., Award for Public Service. Before joining the ACLU staff, I worked in private practice focusing on criminal defense, prisoners' rights and police misconduct litigation and was also a staff attorney for the California Appellate Project in San Francisco, established by the California Supreme Court and the State Bar to oversee and provide case assistance to the lawyers appointed by the Court to represent death row defendants in their state and federal post-conviction proceedings.
