8 "Protecting the Meaning and Value of Birthright Citizenship" (the "Executive Order"), that

10 or who is lawfully present in the United States but on a temporary basis, and (ii) a father who 11 is neither a citizen nor a lawful permanent resident ; and

12 WHEREAS, Birthright citizenship is enshrined in the Citizenship Clause of the 22 WHEREAS, The Executive Order would also block these children's access to U.S.

2 affirmed over 125 years ago in a landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision involving San 3 Francisco-born Chinese American, Wong Kim Ark; and

4 WHEREAS, Wong Kim Ark was born in 1873 at 751 Sacramento Street in San 5 Francisco Chinatown to parents Wong Si Ping and Wee Lee, who owned a grocery store but 6 were unable to naturalize as U.S. citizens due to prevailing anti-Chinese policies; and

7 WHEREAS, In 1895, Wong Kim Ark returned to San Francisco after visiting his family
8 in China and upon reentry, was denied admission on the false basis that he was not a citizen 9 of the United States, and ordered to be deported under the 1882 Chinese Exclusion Act; and

10 WHEREAS, The Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association in San Francisco hired 11 an attorney to fight Wong Kim Ark's unlawful detention, and the case was ultimately decided 12 by the U.S. Supreme Court on March 28, 1898, which ruled that birthright citizenship applied 13 to all children born in the United States including those whose parents were immigrants; and

14 WHEREAS, Wong Kim Ark's legacy and historic fight for justice ensured the 15 Constitution's guarantee of birthright citizenship regardless of the race, class, or immigration 16 status of a child's parents; now, therefore, be it
