

Rohit Agarwal

rohit@sorafinance.com

Rohit Agarwal has been a leader making a tangible impact on the lives of San Franciscans for the past 9 years. He lives in Potrero Hill (D10) with his wife, Candice, and two daughters, Anjali (3) and Anika (1). Rohit has extensive experience across strategy, finance, education, law and housing. He is currently the co-founder and CEO of San Francisco based, Sora Finance, a fintech company focused on lowering the cost of debt (home, auto, and student) for Americans.

Previously, Rohit was the Head of Kiva USA where he was responsible for all lending across the country to underserved small businesses, including the San Francisco Small Business Recovery Fund. Rohit also worked as a consultant in McKinsey & Company's San Francisco office serving utilities, public sector, and education clients. Additionally, he was the lead author of the Bay Area Educator Affordable Housing Coalition report that laid out concrete plans on how to more effectively build teacher housing. Rohit was the former Generation USA CEO, a job training program for unemployed youth that recruited, trained, and employed thousands of unemployed youth. Additionally, Rohit was a public high school teacher at M680 in Harlem, NY and worked in the Public Defender's Office in Jacksonville, FL. Rohit served as the California State Director for South Asian for Biden 2020.