8. Proposed Grant Project Summary: The San Francisco Health Network’s low-income patients bear a disproportionately high burden of food insecurity and health consequences such as hypertension and diabetes. Improving the availability and consumption of healthy and nutritious foods, including produce and whole grains, would have significant impacts on this public health challenge. According to a recent study led by researchers at UC San Francisco, HIV positive people who received healthy food and snacks for six months were more likely to follow their medication regimens. The study also found that people with type 2 diabetes were less depressed and less likely to make trade-offs between food and healthcare.

Food As Medicine seeks to bridge the divide between healthcare systems and the food community including the SF Marin Food Bank, farmers’ markets, and grocery stores. This partnership can transform and sustain the eating habits of low-income patients accessing healthcare services from community clinics in San Francisco. The collaboration intends to do this through the innovation of providing “food as medicine” through clinic-based food “pharmacies.”
