This memo contains research notes from research undertaken by architectural historian, Stacy Farr, and Planning Preservation staff, Pilar LaValley, regarding public access to 155 Sansome Street and to Diego Rivera's fresco, titled Allegory of California, located in stairwell between 10th and 11th floors of the subject building. Attached to this memo are newspaper clippings associated with the research notes. Other documentation, including copies of PDFs of websites, webpages, articles, etc. documenting public access to the fresco, referenced in draft ordinance and Executive Summary for Planning Case No. 2021-005992DES were attached to the previously submitted Planning transmittal, dated January 5, 2022.

Research Notes: Public access to upper floors of 155 Sansome, 1931-1987

Background: 155 Sansome Street opens January 4, 1930, operates as the offices of the San Francisco Stock Exchange through 1953 when the building was sold to Industrial Indemnity Company. Mural is completed in March 1931. Upper floors were called the Pacific Stock Exchange Luncheon Club when the building opened, also referred to as the Stock Exchange Lunch Club, and the Stock Exchange Club. Became the San Francisco City Club in 1987.

Stacy Farr spoke with Demetri Rizos, Executive Director of the San Francisco City Guides on November 4, 2021. He told her that prior to the pandemic, the City Guides offered guided tours of the City Club for fifteen years. Tours were offered all year long, Mondays and Wednesdays, at no cost, and were capped at twenty-five people per tour. He says the tour was one of their most popular and was usually "sold out." Tours have not restarted post-Covid.

1986 - Herb Caen, "Caenniption Fits," San Francisco Chronicle, December 8, 1986, 41: "Rare opportunity! The Stock Exchange Club at 155 Sansome will be open to the public today from 2 to 4 p.m. to show off the Diego Rivera mural, this being the artist's centennial, but the club itself is equally a work of art. An Art Deco masterpiece, in fact."

It is rather hard to believe but new figures just released statistical department of the Merchants Exchange show a 54,830 ton increase in March over February. This is tonnage over San Francisco piers. This is remarkable in view of the reduction in the number of lines serving this port.

Important

The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, a leading factor in sponsoring reciprocal trade agreements, is very anxious to know what the public thinks about them. In an attempt to find out, it has decided to hold a Statewide trade agreements conference to develop the facts and clear up misunderstandings. The conference will be called May 6 at 9:30 a. m. in the auditorium of the Stock Exchange at 155 Sansome.

Bride in Hawaii

SAN PEDRO, April 21 (A)-H. E. Smith, supervisor of procurement in San Francisco for the Works Progress Administration, went to Hawaii on a business trip and returned with a bride, Mrs. Charla Stirling Smith, niece of Senator Bilbo of Mississippi. They were on the liner Matsonia which docked here today. Miss Stirling was a secretary with the WPA in Hawaii and Smith met her when he went there to arrange for transfer of the WPA procurement branch to the army.

Stocks Finish Week With Further Gain

VOL. CXLI, NO. 44

Utilities Lead List as New Buying Enters Short Session

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (A)-A fresh supply of bullish enthusiasm swept over the security markets again today and stocks, led by the utilities, topped off a week of nearly uninterrupted price advances by working moderately higher. A number of securities reached new peak prices for the year. Traders showed an inclination to take profits in the closing minutes of the abbreviated market, but their selling orders were not heavy enough to erase an earlier advance. Stocks closed with average prices, as measured in the Associated Press-Standard Statistics index, gaining 1.4 points to the highest level yet reached on the recovery and only a few points below the year's highest level reached last March.

RECORD SATURDAY Sales totaled 2,201,980 shares, the largest Saturday of the month with the exception of August 6. The commodity markets furnished the springs from which the stock market drew its fresh supplies of encouragement. The sight of buoyantly advancing cotton prices, which carried that staple to within striking distance of 10 cents a pound, attracted fresh buying to stocks of manufacturing companies. Cotton was up $2.40 to $2.80 a bale. Firmness of the woolen and silk markets also inspired fresh confidence. Shares of companies which are largely dependent upon conditions in the country's grain belt registered gains as a result of advances of nearly 2 cents a bushel in the prices of wheat and other grains.

Consolidated Gas, Public Service and United Gas Improvement were up 1 or more points, while gains of 2 to as much as 4 points were made by American and Foreign Power, Electric Power and Light and North American.

The steel stocks figured in an early advance, but lost most of their gains under late profit taking. The copper stocks were strong, Anaconing gaining a point or so. J. I. Case went to a new high for the year and International Harvester was up substantial fraction. The rails were em in which Rivera the Communist pleaded artistic integrity: "I paint what I see/I paint what I paint/I paint what I think," and Nelson Rockefeller, the capitalist—and commissioner of the mural—replied: "I owe a little to God and Gramper/And after all/It's my wall."

The work was eventually destroyed on Rockefeller's orders.

Lucienne Bloch, the daughter of composer Ernest Bloch, had met Rivera in New York late in 1931 at a banquet. Bloch was seated next to Rivera "not because I was an artist, but because I spoke French." one of several languages in which he was fluent.

"I talked with him for three hours, never knowing even what I was eating," Bloch says. When they parted, she told him, "I'd love to grind your colors," and he invited her to come to the building where he was working.

Rivera's wife, artist Frida Kahlo, also was at the banquet. When the two women met, Kahlo told Bloch, "I hate you." Later, they became friends—"after she realized I was anything but a flirt"—and the encounter became an amusing memory.

At 300 pounds and standing 6 feet 4 inches, Rivera was a grotesque yet compelling figure with what Bloch calls "frog eyes." He was also a notorious womanizer. "It wasn't done obviously," Bloch says. Except sometimes.

"We were all very mad at him for having a girlfriend in the same

THE HUNALS

On Monday, the 100th anniversary of the birth of Mexican artist Diego Rivera, his four Bay Area murals will a be open to the public.

Murals at the San Francisco Art Institute, 800
Chestnut Street: Stern Hall, UC-Berkeley, Hearst and Highland Place; and in the foyer of the theater at City College of San Francisco, 50 Phelan Avenue, may be viewed from 9 a.m. to $p.m.
The mural at the Stock
Exchange Club, 155
Sansome St., San Francisco, will be open from 2 to 4 p.m.

A birthday party, with refreshments and a no-host bar, will be from 5 to 7 p.m. in the Diego Rivera Gallery at the Art Institute, Lucienne Bloch and Stephen Pope Dimitroff will be guests.

York when a Bulgarian immigrant and aspiring artist named Dimitroff showed up in Detroit asking in broken Russian — another of Rivera's linguist accomplishments — to work with the artist.

Bloch and Dimitroff met when he and another of Rivera's assistants preceded the artist to New York to prepare for the Rockefeller Center mural. They had run out of money and the other assistant who Rivera project, and today those photographs are considered treasures.

Two years later, they were married.

By the time Rivera returned to San Francisco to do the "art-in-action" murals for the 1939 World's Fair on Treasure Island, which are now at City College, the Dimitroffs were off on their own. They first came here in 1948, hoping to see Rivera's murals. But in the red-baiting McCarthy era, Rivera's radical politics had made his art suspect.

They found the fair works on the theme of Pan-American unity crated up, as they remained for almost 20 years, and the Art Institute's fresco concealed by canvas and gauze, as it remained for 10 years.

In seeking to interpret the Art Institute mural, "The Making of a Fresco Showing the Building of a City," students have questioned the Dimitroffs about "psychological things."

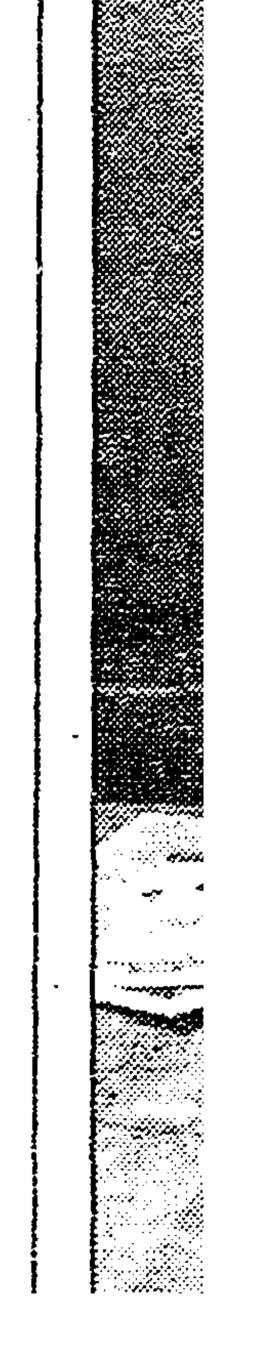

"But Rivera was very simple, very direct," Bloch says. "He first looked at the architecture of the building and then the meaning of the building," which explains the inclusion of the artist, his assistants and his friend Ralph Stackpole, a San Francisco artist, in the Art Institute mural.

But Rivera also included prominent San Franciscans who had been nice to him — William Gerstle, president of the San Francisco Art Commission. who commissioned the work: Arthur Brown Jr., architect of the school; and Timothy Pflueder architect of the San Francisco

School Gives Training for Style Advice

Fashion Art Institution Founded for Purpose in 1922

An institution of learning is the stepping stone of civilization and a joy to the community. Art of yesteryear was limited to a few phases; but art of today has changed the living conditions of man. Everything must be beautiful to the eye and style right to the highest degree.

In 1920 Fashion Art School was founded by Miss Anna Addison Gallagher, who at that time sensed this trend of art and governed the teachings of her school accordingly. She saw the new source of demand in the world of fashion-style and advising-and prepared the school to equip its graduates to become merchandising and fabric stylists. This medium offers a means of intelligent buying, and it is predicted that the day is not far distant when every up-to-date department store, dress manufacturer and specialty shop, will add one or more style experts to its regular staff in the departments of women's wear, cosmetics, accessories, fabrics and home furnishings.

MUST HAVE TRAINING

To become a fabric or merchandising stylist one must have had a previous training in costume design or fashion illustration. Fashion Art School is prepared to give these courses both in the preliminary and advanced stages.

Its graduates are employed in every exclusive store and in the wholesale dress and millinery trade. Its instructors have been chosen for their outstanding success in the practice of their professions in New York, Europe and elsewhere.

OUTLINE OF COURSES

The following is a brief outline of the courses offered:

WHEN BENNINGTON COLLEGE President Gail Thain Parker arrived in San Francisco for a recent national meeting of college heads, a hotel clerk had a registration card listing her as "Mrs. Thomas Parker."

"I handed it back and said, 'This is not my name. I am Gail Thain Parker.' The hotel clerks thought this was very funny," said the first woman president of a major college whose husband (Tom Parker) is its vice president.

The disregard of professional identity is a typical irritant to women in today's business world, which is adjusting with some difficulty to the increasing number of women executives.

Because of this there is a real need for a new kind of etiquette, an awareness to changes that Emily Post and Amy Vanderbilt never encountered.

Sexist practices are gradually giving way — sometimes with nervous laughter, sometimes with red faces, sometimes with mature acceptance, and now and then with a "it's about time" male reaction.

President and Vice President Parker take a firm, good - humored view. "The way in which people react to me says a lot about how they view the role of women," said Tom Parker. "At one meeting in which we were mentioned, a man next to me said, 'You can't tell me he's not running the show.' I told him, after identifying myself, 'We are both running the show.'"

Major pitfalls seem to be the business lunch and the all male clubs. These can bring about a change in the club, said Don White, Crocker Bank vice president and manager of the advertising and public relations department, as he pointed to revised rules last year at the Stock Exchange Club.

"Our bank president, Leslie C. Peacock, who is also a club director, got caught in a meeting there which ran into the noon hour. He was embarrassed because the businesswomen present couldn't be asked to stay. So he worked successfully to open membership to women in the club which is very convenient to everybody in the financial district."

As for who picks up the tab, White said, "I am delighted to have the woman who asks me to a business lunch pay. It happened twice recently at the Garden Court. One woman quietly signed the check. The second, obviously more nervous about my reaction, arranged in advance to have no bill presented."

* * *

Gloria Steinem, one of the founders and editors of the women's movement Ms. Magazine, said, "I'm expected to behave in a certain way so there is still some tension about a luncheon check with men.

"However, my pet problem is the professional body that asks me to speak but bars women members. I try never to appear before such a group. These are silly little bodies of power in the male world. I was happy to see that only a few days ago the Harvard Club decided to admit women."

Zellerbachs Honor Conductor, Soprano

A very tanned Arthur Fiedler and attractive soprano Mary Gray were the guests of honor yesterday afternoon at a reception given by Art Commission President Harold Zellerbach and Mrs. Zellerbach at the Stock Exchange Club.

The honored pair will open the San Francisco Art Commission's summer pops concert series tomorrow night at Civic Auditorium.

Petite Mrs. Zelierbach, wearing a black dress and a pale blue hat, greeted the guests against a background of string music.

Mrs. Zellerbach reported that American Ambassador to Italy J. D. Zellerbach and Mrs. Zellerbach are expected here in mid-August. Mrs. Zellerbach will fly directly from Rome, while the Ambassador plans to stop off in Washington, D. C. They will be here about a month.

Other members of the Zellerbach clan, the Stephen Zellerbachs, with Merla's sister, Mrs. Max Kettner, and the Richard Zellerbachs were in evidence. They, along with Italian Consul General Pierluigi Alvera, went to the Menlo Circus Club luau after the party.

Poom de Ralguine was telling friends that Tony Duquette and Vladimir Dukelsky (Vernon Duke) who had been here from the South, flew back to Hollywood Wednesday night directly after being honored by Poom at a cocktail party. The visitors had been dinner guests the night before of the Louis Benoists at Almaden.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan London were among the guests. Mrs. London leaves August 1 for a stay with the Bruce Kelhams at Tahoe and then on to Coeur d'Alene, Iaho. Meanwhile, Mr. London will take their boat "Adventuress" up to Seattle for the Gold Cup races August 10 and 11, where he will meet his wife.

Dining With the Ladies

TWO old sayings—the ones about never underestimate the power of a woman and rules are made to be broken—got together the other night, and the result was the Wine and Food Society's annual Ladies' Dinner.

The strictly masculine organization held its only coeducational function of the year in another bastion of masculinity, the Stock Exchange Club.

For the first time, women had something to do with planning the lavish dinner. Cochairmen of the party were Mr. and Mrs. Aime Michaud Jr. and Mrs. George Burgess.

What Giants Do With Up-Front Ticket Money

with applications for National League playoff and World Series tickets. Now all that needs to happen is for the hometowners to go all the way.

Applications for tickets must include a check or money order for games that will not be played until October.

At Candlestick there will be 15,-000 box seats at $25 a pop, 40,000 reserved seats at $20 for the playoffs. When the Giants play in the World Series at Candlestick — assuming that minor miracle is performed by Roger Craig and his youthful stalwarts — tickets will cost $40 for box seats, $30 for reserved.

Simple arithmetic shows that the grand sum that will come into the Giants ticket office for games here is close to $10 million.

When asked the other day about what happens to the money as it cascades in, Giants' Executive Vice President Corey Busch said, "We stick it in a mattress."

Then he had second, more serious thoughts.

What happens to the big bucks, Busch said, is that it is deposited in a short-term account at Bank of America, the team's official bank.

"It earns short-term moneymarket rates," Busch said, "something over 5 percent but under 6."

should be emphasized that his office is acting as a ticket agent for the National League in playoff and possible World Series games at Candlestick only. The team gets to keep only its share of the booty.

What happens if the roof falls in and the Giants don't make the playoffs and are aced out of appearing in the series?

"People who signed up for tickets can go to their nearest Bank of America branch and get their money back in cash," Busch said. Or they can wait for a check in the mail.

The Giants' connection with the big bank goes back a long way. Lou Lurie, father of Bob, the team's owner, was one of the bank's major landlords. He believed that leasing a branch building to the bank was as good as leasing a building to the U.S. Post Office.

Those were the days, of course, when BofA was expanding its branch system, not shrinking as it now is.

Club, a two-floor art deco wonder high up in the building at 155 Sansome Street, has crashed brings back memories of happier days when it was THE luncheon station for the city's financial bon ton.

The club closed down in May because of lack of interest from existing members — most of whom were getting long in the tooth — and an inability to attract new members.

Now a new group is out to revive the club under a new name,
The City Club. Good luck!

The 58-year-old business club was born at the wrong time. It opened its plush quarters a month after the 1929 market crash, languished for years, revived in the 1950s and '60s but lost out to the much jazzier Bankers Club built atop the Bank of America tower in the '70s.

What made the Stock Exchange Club a capitalistic wonder was the gold leaf ceiling in its massive lounge, and its silver leaf ceiling in the dining room. Those touches, plus smooth, matched goat-skin walls in the lounge, gave the club an aroma of richness matched only by the fine Havanas smoked by the older members.

And the best touch of all: The Diego Rivera murals in the grand staircase, topped by a nude female figure purported to be Helen Wills Moody. At least the face looked like her.

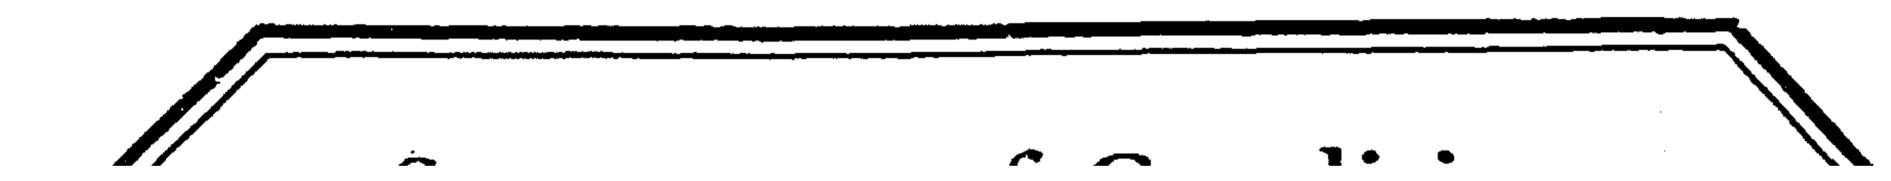

When the club's capitalist founders commissioned Rivera to do the murals, little did they know, or care, that the Mexican artist was an avid communist.

Decline and Fall IT IS TRUE, Mistuh Jimmy. We have

despoliated the land, muddied the waters, made murky the heavens and (iccccch) fouled our own nests. Nevertheless, fair is fair, and as a friend of what is left of the earth, I am bugged by a wire service story last week from Dickey, Maine. I use the verb "bugged" advisedly — "nous buggons, vous buggez, ils buggoff" because I am also a friend of bugs, especially cockaroaches, which wear their skeletons on the outside and shall inherit what is left of the earth because they are immune to radiation, television and improperly thawed pizzas. As the late John Steinbeck once said, impressed by my concern for flora and fauna, "He is a man who steps high over bugs." Especially barefoot ... You remember Flora and Fauna. As the Androgynous Sisters, they were very big just before and during World War II, their biggest hitting being "The Boogie-Woogie Bagel Boy." Maxine was the one in the middle. BUT I DIGRESS. The wire service story out of Dickey, Maine, reported that "the discovery of a rare, wild snapdragon in a remote area of northern Maine could thwart construction of a $600 million hydro-electric project." Obviously, this is not your garden variety snapdragon — in fact, it is called the furbish lousewort; I never met a lousewort I didn't like, furbish or refurbished, but since only some 35 specimens of licewort have been found, I say gather them into a nosegay for the coffee table, and let us get on with the project. Dr. Paul Seabury of UC claims to have met Furbish Lousewort III, and to have heard him say, "Friends of the Earth are not necessarily friends of man." (This was not the original Furbish Lousewort, obviously). One of the ironies here is that botanists have long considered the furbish lousewort to be extinct. Why these busybody botanists were mucking around in Dickey, Maine, was not made clear in the article, but can one doubt they were there to make trouble? * HISTORIC FOOTNOTE: Dickey, Maine, was named for the inventor of the dickey, an article of men's apparel long considered as

In early movie comedies, the dickey popped out from the vest and hit the wearer in the face, causing carefully controlled laughter. Along with the dickey, starched cuffs, protruding one-half inch beyond the jacket sleeve, were considered de rigueur among the bon ton. In answer to your delicately unspoken question, nothing but bare skin was worn between the dickey and the cuffs. At Cotillion Balls during the turn of the nose, the smell was unbearable. THE CAPITALIST system is mighty and shall prevail, no matter how many snapdragons are thrown into the path of a $600 million power project which, we are told, "has been in the planning stage for more than a decade." (From this you may deduce, correctly, that the Army Corps of Engineers is involved; this group is invited to go the way of dickeys and snapdragons, too). Not that there's much left to the capitalist system or even Western democracy; to paraphrase Winston Churchill, "it's the worst system in the world except for all the others," a sentiment I think we can all put up with, or, to paraphrase Winston Churchill, a sentiment up with which we can all put. At last count, there were only about 15 or 20 capitalist democracies left in the world, which makes all of us endangered. Will Friends of the Earth speak up for us, or only for Furbish Lousewort, may his tribe decrease? THE ABOVE abysmal thought came to me as I was lunching at the Stock Exchange Club on Sansome. I go there occasionally to admire the Art Dece architecture — a high point of capitalist art — and to look at Diego Rivera's huge mural of Northern Californiana, arranged around a woman's head for whom the 1920s tennis star. Helen Wills, was said to be the model. The Club looks down on the Stock Exchange itself; its heroic statues at the entrance were the work of the beloved Telegraph Hill sculptor, Ralph Stackpole, who became so incensed at capitalist politics that he moved permanently to France. These ironies never fail to capture the heart of sixdays-a-week columnists, also endangered the Communist, Rivera, decorating the capitalists' club with the likeness of a woman who stands to right of Marie Antoinette, as the self-exile's monuments guard the portals of The System's holy of holies. MY LUNCHEON partner was a sharp octogenarian, a native San Franciscan, an Old Blue who, true to The System, would be at Memorial Stadium in Berkeley Saturday for the one true Big Game. But he. too, is worried not about the Bears or the bullish Cards but about the decline of the West. "What's to become of The System?" he asked an immensely rich banker friend, who replied, "System? We took it (the money) from the mob (meaning the people') and some day they will take it back." "And." persisted my worried friend.

"what will you say when the mob appears at the front door of your beautiful mansion and wants your head on a pike?" "I will say," smiled the banker. "Thanks for letting me get away with it this long!" Furbish Lousewort III could not have said it better as he jumped out of the way othe onrushing bulldezers.
