A. Abstract

Applicant's Name: San Francisco Sheriff's Department

Title of the Project: No Violence Alliance One Family Reentry Initiative (NoVA-OFRI)

Dollar Amount Request: $300,000

Category: Category 1: Units or components of state and local government agencies serving incarcerated adults.

Population Served:

Eligibility criteria for participation in NoVA-OFRI includes: (1) being a sentenced probationer incarcerated in SF County Jail with a history of substance abuse and a parent of a minor child(ren), (2) demonstrating motivation to engage in treatment and ancillary services, (3) having no allegations of sexual abuse or severe physical abuse of minors and (4) releasing to the City and County of San Francisco.

Program Goals:

1) Reduce recidivism among San Francisco's reentry population; 2) Break the cycle of substance abuse and criminality; 3) Support stable, healthy, unified families; 4) Build capacity towards institutionalization of a coordinated, family-centered system that links experience in custody with services post release and is inclusive of the courts, probation, county jail and community based organizations.

Summary of Service Strategies/Activities:

NoVA-OFRI's comprehensive, family-focused continuum consists of nine components that span from in-custody to post-release: 1) screening and assessment 2) intensive case management; 3) family mapping; 4) contact visitation; 5) parenting education; 6) family transition healing circles; 7) therapeutic services; 8) service coordination; 9) substance abuse treatment; and 10) evaluation.

Numerical Listing of Key/Major Deliverables:

1. Enroll 50 families annually into the NoVA-OFRI program.
2. Complete risk and need assessments with 100% of families enrolled into NoVA-OFRI.
3. Conduct weekly intensive case management meetings with 100% of the participants actively enrolled in NoVA-OFRI.
4. Link a minimum of 85% of individuals identified as having a drug abuse treatment need into in-custody drug treatment and/or community-based drug treatment upon release.
5. Facilitate a minimum of 20 Family Treatment Team meetings annually.
6. Complete all evaluation activities in a timely fashion including monthly submission of site-specific data submissions and quarterly data submissions to DOJ.

1. Statement of the Problem

“Drug abuse hurts many people, not just the addict. It hurts the grandmother whose grandchild steals from her. It hurts the wife whose husband beats her when he gets high. It hurts the child whose addicted parents cannot care for him.”¹ Focusing solely on the needs of substance abusing offenders leaves the family members-sometimes the people that can have the most impact on positive behavior change within the offender-with little support or opportunity to be involved in positive change. It also misses a rare opportunity for more systematic change that may lead to reduced risk of drug use and criminal behavior within not only the offender's life but that of multiple members of the family as well. For families of drug offenders, most especially low income families, the criminal justice system may be the best (and potentially only) chance to engage them in services they desperately need.

1. a. Inability to fund without federal assistance: The San Francisco County Jails currently offer a range of services for individuals while incarcerated including in-custody drug treatment, parenting classes, case management, reentry planning and educational programs. In addition, there are many support services for children and families within the city of San Francisco offered by county agencies and local community based organizations. Yet none of these programs currently provide joint services for incarcerated individuals and their families during incarceration and wrap-around services for the full family after reentry into the community. The proposed No Violence Alliance-One Family Reentry Initiative (NoVA-OFRI)—a family based treatment model—intends to fill this vital service gap in an effort to help target the specific criminogenic needs including anti-social attitudes and values, anti-social associates, family dysfunction, poor self-control and problem-solving skills, substance abuse and lack of employment/employment skills for the offender and his/her family that have been proven to most likely lead to successful reentry and decrease in recidivism.^{2,3} Given the current budget crisis for both the State of California and more locally the City and County of San Francisco, the San Francisco Sheriff's Department is in need of federal funding to implement this vital and innovative family-based approach to service delivery and offender rehabilitation. Thus, the San Francisco Sheriff's Department is seeking funding from the US Department of Justice under the Family-Based Prisoner Substance Abuse Treatment Program Grant Announcement.

1. b. Target population and their number of minor children: San Francisco County Jails house an average daily population of 2,000 individuals in six County Jails.⁴ While the Sheriff's Department is only just beginning to record the number of individuals who are parents of minor children, there is not yet formal data available. But using rates of incarcerated parents published by the Bureau of Justice Statistics, it can be estimated that on any given day, roughly 1,040 incarcerated individuals at SF County Jails are parents to over 2,080 minor children.⁵

1. c. Target population treatment needs and recidivism and substance use data: A report published by the Bureau of Justice Statistics in 2005 demonstrated that nationally, 68% of individuals incarcerated in our county jails report symptoms that met the substance dependence or abuse criteria in the year before their admission to jail, and over 85% of convicted jail inmates were found to be drug/alcohol involved. Of those who met the criteria for substance dependence or abuse, they were more likely than other inmates to have a criminal record, (70% compared to 46%), were twice as likely as other inmates to have been homeless in the year before their offences (16% compared to 9%), more likely to have grown up with a parent or guardian who abused alcohol or drugs (37% compared to 17%) and more likely to have had a family member other than themselves that had been incarcerated (50% compared to 38%).⁶ Additionally, 20% of parents incarcerated in US prisons, reported a history of physical or sexual abuse, 41% had a current medical problem, and 57% had an identified mental health issue.⁷ Finally, BJS reported recidivism rates from 1994 (the last time BJS reported on this data) that documented a 68% rearrest rate for US prisoners and a 50% reincarceration rate back to prison within 3 years.⁸

San Francisco is no exception. A March 2008 San Francisco Reentry Needs Assessment conducted for the San Francisco Reentry Council showed that the vast majority of San Francisco parolees exhibit risk factors in the areas of housing (81%), education and employment (90%), mental health (27.5%), and substance abuse (67%).⁹ There are consistent social factors that impact reentry: (1) Unmet basic needs including homelessness, unemployment and lack of access to medication and other primary health services; (2) insufficient pre-release transition planning and insufficient resources for reentry services; (3) lack of community involvement; and (4) loss of family support and disruption of relationships while incarcerated.

1. d. Treatment needs of family: As Parke and Clarke-Stewart state in Effects of Parental Incarceration on Young Children, "Incarceration is not a single or discrete event, but a dynamic process that unfolds over time."¹⁰ Because the effects of incarceration are felt over time, support and services are needed throughout the incarceration process for the entire family: from arrest through reentry. Although individual family situations vary widely, losing a family member to incarceration often has significant impact on family members' development, especially young children, and overall financial well being.¹¹ A complicating reality is that incarceration is often preceded by a challenging period that may include familial instability, marital discord and conflict, child abuse or neglect, parental absence, and reduced access to support.^{12,13} Financial impacts before and during incarceration may include the costs of legal representation, maintaining contact through collect phone calls and visits, placing money in jail accounts for basic needs, and loss of income from the incarcerated family member.¹⁴ The financial impacts continue after the incarcerated family member is released and include difficulty with gainful employment due to stigma, employment restrictions, and often limited job skills. The social impact of stigma is not isolated to employment or to the individual who is or was incarcerated. The stigma of incarceration affects the entire family: children may lose friends, rental housing agreements may not be renewed, and friends and neighbors may withdraw from family members.^{15,16,17} The isolation and stigmatization experienced by family members of an incarcerated individual serve to increase the family's challenges as they lose community resources and social networks at a time when they most need support.¹⁸ Yet there are some protective factors for children and families impacted by incarceration that should be considered in a family-based treatment model. Factors that research suggests protect, buffer and/or modify the effects of parental or partner incarceration include: (1) the quality of the relationships with extended family and non-family social networks, (2) the nature and quality of the family's living arrangements, and (3) the opportunities to maintain contact with the incarcerated family member.¹⁹ Given, that research demonstrates that maintaining family connections is a strong buffer against recidivism (which closely tracks relapse), NoVA-OFRI's proposed strategies to maintain family connections before, during and after incarceration will have powerful implications for the effectiveness of substance abuse treatment and reentry services.

1. e. Process to id offender risk and offender and family needs: Upon entry into the SF Sheriff's Department and prior to sentencing, SF Probation administers, on a voluntary basis, an integrated package of assessment tools—including Correctional Assessment Intervention System (CAIS) and a family impact statement—to determine criminogenic risk and needs for all probationers to inform supervision level, clinical suitability and service needs.

1. f. Availability of drug and other treatment services: SFSD currently runs the following treatment services for individuals while incarcerated in SF County Jails: Roads to Recovery: An in-custody drug treatment program providing re-entry life skills and participation in recovery process groups. Sisters Project: In-custody substance abuse treatment and behavior management for women including intensive programming, case management, re-entry planning, and drug treatment referrals. For individuals in the community, San Francisco has a "treatment on demand" policy through which residents have access to a continuum of alcohol, drug, and other related treatment services through the Department of Public Health's network of treatment providers. Yet even with this rich treatment network, waitlists exist and in the event of a waiting period it is critical to have services in place to support sustained commitment to treatment.

1. g. Reentry planning for offenders; case management and linkages to community-based treatment providers; and aftercare and continuing case management upon reentry: The City and County of San Francisco is a national leader in coordinated reentry planning. The Board of Supervisors enacted legislation formalizing a single Reentry Council charged with identifying the needs of the reentry population, developing programs based on evidence-based practice, seeking funding, and removing barriers to reintegration. The Reentry Council is evidence of the city's strong political will to reduce crime and recidivism by improving services for formerly incarcerated individuals. A key example, is the San Francisco Sheriff's Department No Violence Alliance Project (NoVA) launched in 2006 with support from the Public Defender. NoVA utilizes an intensive pre and post-release case management and coordinated support services model to support offenders in their re-entry. A December 2009 formal evaluation of the program noted the success of the NoVA case management model, highlighting the effectiveness of its professional network of community-based organizations for information sharing, ongoing learning and for ensuring that clients have access to the resources they need—including substance abuse treatment, job training programs, and housing services—for successful re-integration. The NoVA One Family Reentry Initiative (NoVA-OFRI) will enhance this successful case management model by incorporating family members into the program thereby filling a significant gap in the system of pre- and post-release treatment and services in San Francisco.

2. Project/Program Design and Implementation

NoVA-OFRI is model of family-based treatment and wraparound case management services that acknowledge the challenges to the family presented by substance abuse and criminal behavior, while promoting new insights about family strengths, productive behaviors and healthy coping mechanisms. NoVA-OFRI will enhance recovery and family supportive services, both in jail and post release, providing a holistic, family-centered approach to treatment and reintegration, creating opportunities for family healing, and emphasizing family potential. Led by the San Francisco Sheriff's Department, and integrated into its existing NoVA Project, NoVA-OFRI will provide a coordinated, comprehensive response to parents of minors who will be released from the San Francisco jail back to the City and County of San Francisco including resources to address the myriad needs of offenders, their children and other family members and caregivers. NoVA-OFRI builds on the groundbreaking work of San Francisco's One Family Working Group, an interdisciplinary effort formed in 2007 to collaborate with the County Jail to ensure meaningful visitation for children with parents incarcerated in the six facilities that comprise the jail. Current policy, unprecedented in the nation, ensures that parents and children now enjoy contact visits, as opposed to the window (behind glass) visits that were previously the norm and that remain the norm at county jails across the nation. The Working Group supports both the ongoing implementation and the institutionalization of this policy. Several of the Working Group's members have been active in the development of NoVA-OFRI and the Initiative will continue to be supported by the vision and advocacy of the One Family Working Group while building upon the foundation of SFSD's NoVA case management model. Integration with these groundbreaking initiatives will support NoVA-OFRI's sustainability, institutionalization and leveraging of resources.

The goals of NoVA-OFRI are to: 1) Reduce recidivism among San Francisco's reentry population; 2) Break the cycle of substance abuse and criminality; 3) Support stable, healthy, unified families; and 4) Build capacity towards institutionalization of a coordinated, family-centered system that links experience in custody with services post release and is inclusive of the courts, probation, county jail and community based organizations. Specific objectives and activities associated with each of these goals can be found in the attached project timeline.

2. a. Eligibility and selection of program participants: Eligibility criteria for participation in NoVA-OFRI includes: (1) being a sentenced probationer incarcerated in SF County Jail with a history of substance abuse and a parent of a minor child(ren), (2) demonstrating motivation to engage in treatment and ancillary services, (3) having no allegations of sexual abuse or severe physical abuse of minors and (4) releasing to the City and County of San Francisco. Outreach for participation will be conducted within the jail through program marketing in parenting classes and by identification of eligible participants by probation officers.

2. b. Proposed activities that address program goals: NoVA-OFRI's comprehensive, family-focused continuum will consist of ten components that span from in-custody to post-release: 1) screening and assessment 2) intensive case management; 3) family mapping; 4) contact visitation; 5) parenting education; 6) family transition healing circles; 7) therapeutic services; 8) service coordination; 9) substance abuse treatment; and 10) evaluation. The following is a brief overview of each service component.

1. Screening and Assessment. The SF Probation Department conducts a pre-sentencing risk assessment using the Correctional Assessment and Intervention System (CAIS) tool to determine criminogenic risk (low, medium and high), needs factors and determine supervision levels and services needed. Probation also conducts a pre-sentencing family impact screening that assesses the impact of incarceration on the family including information on the number of minor children, their current living situation, and identification of children's caretakers. To initiate the substance abuse treatment process, the Addiction Severity Index (ASI) will be administered in jail by a NoVA community service partner. The ASI covers seven areas of a client's life including medical, employment/support, drug and alcohol use, legal, family history, family/social relationships and mental health issues. A summary of the CAIS, Family Impact Screening and ASI will be provided to the NoVA-OFRI Case Manager once assigned.

2. Intensive Case Management. Dedicated NoVA-OFRI case managers—who will be consistently present pre and post release—will engage incarcerated parents to set family goals as well as personal goals for reentry, and make and track referrals to jail-based as well as community-based services and programs in support of their goals. Goals will be individualized and may relate specifically to completing substance abuse treatment and other probation mandates or meeting other institutional requirements. Through the provision of new family-centered services that promote safe, healthy and responsible parent-child relationships NoVA-OFRI will bring a family-centered perspective to existing NoVA case management practices. NoVA-OFRI case managers will meet face to face with participants at least weekly (and in initial months up to three times per week) and while there is no time limit for participation, the average expected length of involvement based on NoVA's experience is 16 months.

3. Family Mapping. Using the Family Impact Screening as a foundation, the NoVA-OFRI case managers will work with the incarcerated parent, their children and immediate family members to identify other family members and social networks that may be able to provide additional support. Efforts will be made to learn more about the role of social networks in the family's life, with the intention of helping them uncover strengths and understand how to tap into additional support to enhance supervision outcomes and facilitate behavioral change.

4. Contact Visitation. Incarcerated parents and their minor children participate in contact visits in child-friendly visiting rooms in the County Jails. Contact visits are supported by institutional protocols and procedures, created in by Community Works collaboration with SFSD, which include an orientation curriculum as well as a system for debriefing parents after visits. The application process for participation in visitation will be supported by NoVA-OFRI case managers. A requirement for parents to engage in contact visitation is participation in the Parenting Inside Out groups (see below). In recognition of the rehabilitative impact of contact visitation, in April 2010, SFSD launched a pilot program to provide visiting van shuttle service from San Francisco's public transportation hub to jail facilities for visiting children, their caregivers and other family.

5. Parenting Education. Parenting Inside Out (PIO) is an evidenced-based cognitive-behavioral parenting curriculum, developed by Children's Justice Alliance that is designed specifically for justice involved parents to help them break the cycle of intergenerational criminality. In 2009, the SFSD began mandating PIO parent education classes, taught by Community Works staff, for parents participating in contact visits. Since inception, PIO has been implemented with 650 incarcerated parents in San Francisco County Jails. At the core of PIO is the Parent Management Training (PMT) curriculum, which appears on the "best practice" lists of the American Psychological Association, the US Department of Health and Human Services, and the Office of Victims of Crime, US Department of Justice. PMT includes communications, problem solving, monitoring, positive reinforcement and non-violent discipline techniques. With PIO, researchers built upon the PMT curriculum to make it effective within the context and restrictions of parents involved in the justice system. PIO consists of learner-centered interactive activities that include facilitated role-play practice, individualized plans for child visits, coaching and guidance at child-centered events, and feedback or problem solving after child visits or phone calls. PIO was recently the subject of a five year, longitudinal, randomized control study funded by the National Institute of Mental Health and was shown to have a positive impact on adjustment to prison and enhancement of parent-child communication and family ties during incarceration. It was also found to have a significant positive impact on re-arrest rates, substance use rates, self-reported criminal behavior rates and employment rates post release. NoVA-OFRI will insure that PIO is available for parents post release so that they can complete the program and continue to build skills to re-establish and maintain healthy bonds within their children.

6. Family Transition Healing Circles. This program works to heal some of the harm that is done when a family experiences disconnection due to incarceration. Facilitated by Community Works, these circles provide a restorative response to incarceration by facilitating a context in which an incarcerated or formerly incarcerated parent, his/her children, the children's caretaker(s) and other family members, friends and/or mentors meet together to discuss: 1) the harm that was created because of the behaviors that led to incarceration, and of the incarceration itself; 2) the physical, emotional, psychological, and spiritual needs that have arisen because of that harm; 3) what needs to be done to help heal the harm; 4) how to plan for a future in which parents are present in the lives of their children including how they will handle communication, conflict, the tasks of daily living, and meeting each other's needs for closeness, affection, and attention. The circle process includes two to three sessions, each about two hours. When possible the first circle will be held inside the jail; the second and third circles will take place on the outside. After the initial 2-3 meetings, the circle-keeper will be available, on an as-needed basis, to help reconvene the family and caregiver for follow-up meetings.

7. Therapeutic Services. Community Works partners with Jail Psychiatric Services and the California Institute of Integral Studies to provide therapeutic services for parents who are identified through PIO as both needing and amendable to therapeutic intervention. Services offered in custody include parent-focused expressive arts group therapy as well as individual therapy. Individual therapy may also continue post release.

8. Service Coordination. Intervention plans for the family and the incarcerated parent will be designed and coordinated as a wraparound system of care, using in jail and post release community-based resources through the creation of Family Treatment Teams (FTT). FTT will be comprised of the NoVA-OFRI Case Managers, Parent Coaches, Family Transition Healing

Circle Facilitator, Probation Officers and others as relevant. To strengthen communication and service coordination across systems of care, NoVA-OFRI will facilitate bi-monthly case consultation meetings with FFT. Parents with open child welfare cases in San Francisco will also be referred to the Dependency Drug Court for a full complement of wrap-around services.

9. Substance Abuse Treatment. The jail administered ASI will be used to inform an appropriate substance abuse treatment referral. Given the reality of wait lists, referrals will be made while the client is still in custody and when possible jail release will be coordinated with a treatment opening. Walden House, a state licensed treatment provider well-experienced in re-entry treatment, will accept participants into comprehensive substance abuse treatment and place them following their release into available treatment beds in the following programs located in San Francisco: The Women's Residential Treatment Program, The Men's Residential Treatment Program, Women's Perinatal Treatment at Pomaroy House, Men's and Women's Outpatient Treatment. If it is not possible to coordinate release with immediate treatment, the released participant will have access to supervised interim NoVA designated housing.

2. c. Overview of existing and new family services: The following chart illustrates the spectrum of services that are available to families involved in NoVA-OFRI. Programs in italics will be added as a result of NoVA-OFRI.

2.d. Aspects of the NoVA-OFRI that fall under priority considerations:

1. High degree of collaboration: NoVA-OFRI demonstrates a high degree of collaboration among a variety of public and private organizations. Collaborating partners include SFSD, SF Dept of Public Health, SF Human Services Agency, SF Probation Dept, Community Works, San Francisco Children of Incarcerated Parents Partnership, Walden House and The Bridging Group.
 2. Coordination with families of offenders: The very design of NoVA-OFRI is to emphasize and institutionalize coordination with families of offenders in-custody and post release. Family-focused strategies include: contact visitation, family mapping, parenting education, family-focused therapy and family transition healing circles.
 3. Use of certain graduated and proportionate responses to violations of parole, probation or supervision and effectively incorporates use of community based sanctions: NoVA-OFRI will offer a community-based system of progressive, intensive responses and services that correspond to the severity of offense and treatment needs. This system includes services such as community service, restitution, house arrest, intensive supervision, electronic monitoring, family counseling and treatment, day treatment, aftercare, and other residential and nonresidential programs. Comprehensive case strategy and risk assessment tools will be employed to determine the most appropriate response for each person based on the risk the offender poses to society, the nature of the offense, nature of prior offenses, and the presence of other risk factors.
- Provide for an independent evaluation of reentry programs:* SFSD will subcontract with The Bridging Group (TBG) to conduct an independent evaluation of No-VA OFRI. This evaluation will include the development of provider-friendly tools to collect and report on all of the DOJ performance measures. In addition, TBG, in collaboration with key NoVA-OFRI stakeholders, will explore the feasibility of following a no-treatment control group who will receive Parenting

Inside Out classes while incarcerated at SF County Jail but will not be involved in wrap-around family treatment services through NoVA-OFRI (due to non-residence in San Francisco) to further assess the effectiveness of the program.

2. e. How legal requirements will be adhered to within the context of the proposed project

Techniques to assess strengths and needs: NoVA-OFRI integrates a number of techniques to assess the strengths and needs of immediate and extended family of the incarcerated parent and to support a treatment plan for the incarcerated parent while insuring well-coordinated and seamless support in-custody through post-release.

Access to consistent and uninterrupted care: NoVA-OFRI will be implemented solely with participants who have been sentenced to SF County Jail and who will be on probation in SF County once released. In the event that a participant is transferred to another jail within the SF County Jail system, all available services will be continued.

Program located in separate area: NoVA-OFRI services will be offered to inmates in San Francisco's program jail—San Bruno—a facility designed for incarcerated men who are participating in rehabilitative programs; and in the Women's Jail in which an NoVA-OFRI program pod will be created to separate participants from the general population.

3. Capabilities and Competencies

3.a. Management structure and staffing of the project: NoVA-OFRI will be coordinated by an SFSD Project Coordinator who will determine program eligibility, facilitate family treatment team meetings, convene jail and community-based partners and strategize resource gaps. Three NoVA case managers will be assigned to NoVA-OFRI and carry small caseloads of up to 17 families annually. A Community Works' (CW) Parent Coach (1 FTE) will offer Parenting Inside

Out classes both in-custody and post release; and a CW Family Transition Healing Circle Facilitator (1 FTE) will conduct family transition healing circles.

3. b. Organization proposed to provide substance abuse and other treatment services:

Walden House has been a pioneer in the field of behavioral health since the non-profit's beginnings in San Francisco's Haight/Ashbury District in 1969. Since that time, the organization has grown to become one of the most respected substance abuse treatment providers for underserved populations throughout California. During 40 years of operation, Walden House has developed a wide spectrum of services to help its clients meet the challenge of rebuilding their lives. With a recovery focus, the organization offers comprehensive adult and family services including: client outreach; individual and group counseling; linkages to primary medical care and other community based human services; HIV/AIDS specific treatment services; professional mental health services; job skills training, career counseling, and educational services; transitional housing and aftercare support; and in-prison and parolee re-entry programs.

3. c. Demonstrate capability of implementing agencies and collaborative partners: The

San Francisco Sheriff's Department (SFSD), the lead agency of NoVA-OFRI, has a long history of successfully implementing and managing grant funded programs. Both the U.S. Department of Education and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services have awarded multiple grants to the Sheriff's Department, reflecting the fact that initial efforts were successful in terms of both process and outcomes. Most recently the Department began its second year of a three-year $1.1 million grant from SAMHSA to provide jail diversion opportunities involving integrated mental health and substance abuse treatment for incarcerated women. SFSD has received significant funding for both in-custody and out-of-custody programs from local public entities such as the Mayor's Office of Criminal Justice, the San Francisco Private Industry

Council and from private foundations including the Zellerbach Family Fund, the Richard and Rhoda Goldman Fund and the Open Society of the Soros Foundation. In addition, the Department was a 2004 recipient of an Innovations in American Government Award and grant from the Ash Institute and the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. Community Works (CW), is a leader in serving children and families affected by parental incarceration. For 15 years, Community Works has partnered strategically with San Francisco's criminal justice system to develop services that meet the needs of the city's most vulnerable families. Community Works oversees a program that offers supervised visitation at the jail in a family-centered, child-friendly environment. This "contact visitation" program virtually eliminated "window visiting," the traumatizing glass-and-telephone visiting that was previously the norm for most children of incarcerated parents. An active member of the One Family Work Group, CW also facilitates Parenting Inside Out classes in the County Jail.

The Bridging Group (TBG), team has been evaluating and researching behavioral interventions and programs in the prison and jail setting for over 25 years. TBG evaluation expertise includes both qualitative and quantitative methods that have been tailored to measure the specific needs, issues, assets and challenges unique to incarcerated individuals and their families. The principals of TBG have published extensively on effective interventions in correctional settings and are currently the Principal Investigators of a translation of an evidenced based intervention, from research to practice. In addition, TBG has worked with a number of federal agencies to conduct evaluation and research programs (Department of Justice, Centers for Disease Control & Prevention, National Institute of Drug Abuse, National Institute of Mental Health, National Institute of Nursing Research, Substance Abuse Mental Health Services Administration CSAP/CSAT). These collaborative projects have included GPRA, formative, process and outcome data collection. Most relevant to NoVA-OFRI, TBG will be working with SFSD, where TBG has a collaborative research history stretching back over 10 years.

3. d. Demonstrate partnership with community based providers: Through its NoVA Project the San Francisco Sheriff's Department has built an effective stakeholder partnership with community based organizations that plan, develop and provide successful transitions from incarceration to community-based substance abuse treatment and related reentry services. Case managers are drawn from multiple agencies and although case managers work out of their home agency, they are accountable to the SFSD. Current community partners include but are not limited to Mission Council on Alcohol Abuse (substance abuse treatment), Northern California Services League, Positive Directions Equals Change, Inc (outpatient treatment services), Recovery Survival Network (recovery support services), UCSF Citywide Case Management Forensic Program (intensive case management), and Community Works (victim services and family transition circles). In addition a wide range of community partners serve as referral sources for the NoVA case managers and provide support services including vocational training and placement, mental health services, and supportive and transitional housing.

4. Budget: See attachment 3 for proposed budget and budget justification.

5. Evaluation, Aftercare, Sustainment, and Data Collection for Performance Measures

5. a. Current ability to collect and analyze client-level performance and outcome data:

Staff from the subcontracted independent evaluators, The Bridging Group (TBG), has over 20 years experience in designing and evaluating prevention and reentry programs for incarcerated individuals. Additionally, TBG has extensive experience collecting, analyzing, and reporting required data to federal funders through electronic submissions including GPRA data to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, OLDC data for the Administration of Children and Families, and PEMS data to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

5. b. Unit cost of project: Based on the formula given in the DOJ grant application, we anticipate the unit cost of the NoVA-OFRI = $2,400 per-family cost.²⁰

5. c. Collection and reporting of required performance metrics data: In collaboration with the SFSD and NoVA-OFRI staff, TBG will develop a data monitoring system to track the progress of performance measure data points requested by DOJ. TBG will develop a Monthly Monitoring Report (MMR) to be completed by NoVA-OFRI case managers that will capture all data points relevant to new monthly data; this report will also provide cumulative data from beginning of the initiative such as: number of TP who found employment and number of TP enrolled in substance abuse services. In addition, NoVA-OFRI staff will be asked to confidentiality report client-level behavioral outcomes related to substance and alcohol use as identified in standardized substance abuse assessments and reassessments conducted each month. Finally, TBG will utilize aggregate crime reports available from SFSD to calculate quarterly crime rates. TBG is aware that the Office of Justice Programs is reviewing performance measures specific to the Family-Based Substance Treatment Program. TBG will revise the MMR and/or identify other data sources as these measures are provided. The following table illustrates performance measures, data points and data source for monthly data collection.

5. d. Goals and objectives for program development, implementation and outcomes: In an effort to facilitate ongoing process evaluation and monitoring of facilitators and barriers toward achieving goals and objectives, TBG will conduct quarterly focus groups with key stakeholders including NOVA-OFRI staff, correctional staff and other community partners. Examples of domains to be covered in focus groups include: (1) development goals and objectives associated with staff hiring and training and incorporation of community partners, (2) implementation goals and objectives associated with recruitment and retention of TP, service utilization, and facilitation of bi-monthly client-centered case consultation meetings, (3) outcome goals and objectives associated with collection and submission of performance measure data. TBG staff will also periodically conduct focus groups with program participants to gather their input on strengths of the program and identification of areas for improvement.

5. e. Documentation, monitoring & evaluation: TBG is committed to cooperate with SFSD to support all DOJ-supported documentation, monitoring, and evaluation efforts. On a monthly basis, Monthly Monitoring Reports will be completed by NoVA-OFRI staff, reviewed by supervisors and SFSD, and sent to TBG by the 10th day of the following month. TBG will input data into a SPSS program to allow for ongoing monitoring and evaluation and timely completion of quarterly monitoring reports to DOJ. Within thirty days after the conclusion of each quarter, TBG staff will electronically submit Performance Measure Monitoring Reports to DOJ.

5. f. Use of evaluation and collaborative partnerships to leverage long-term support, resources, and funding: SFSD has been successful at partnering with various other county agencies as well as with multiple community service providers (as is evident in the number of partners involved in NOVA-OFRI.) As the program further develops and produces meaningful outcomes, data will be shared with all the community partners and stakeholders involved in this project. With this shared data, SFSD anticipates being able to secure long term support, resources, and continuation of funding through various sources.

Re: Department of Justice (BJA-2010-2700)

Dear Mr. Burch:

I write to urge your favorable consideration of the San Francisco Sheriff's Department's application for funding of the under the Second Chance Act Family-Based Prisoner Substance Abuse Treatment Program for the One Family Reentry Initiative, a family-based substance abuse treatment and family strengthening program designed to provide comprehensive services for incarcerated parents in the San Francisco County jail and their families before and after release into the community.

The One Family Reentry Initiative was developed in collaboration with the San Francisco Children of Incarcerated Parents Partnership, Community Works, Walden House and San Francisco's Department of Public Health, Adult Probation Department, Superior Court's Dependency Drug Court, and Human Services Agency. It is designed to strengthen San Francisco's jail and community-based family treatment programs and enhance coordination between our agencies on behalf of families served. Collectively we recognize that strong parent-child relationships aid in children's adjustment to their parents' incarceration, help to mitigate many of the negative outcomes for children of incarcerated parents, improve the parents' reentry process, and reduce recidivism.

The Sheriff's Department is pleased to be the lead agency for this effort and will be primarily responsible for the operational aspects of the program for the duration of the grant period. In addition, we agree to provide individual criminal history information as needed to evaluators, to the extent allowable by law.

The One Family Reentry Initiative builds on parenting and child visitation programs already in place and represents the next, and much needed, step in supporting families after incarceration. Thank you for your consideration of our proposal.

Sincerely,

Dear Sheriff Michael Hennessey,

Community Works is committed to working with the San Francisco Sheriff's Department (SFSD) to promote and implement the NOVA- One Family Reentry Initiative – a family-based substance abuse treatment and family strengthening program designed to provide comprehensive services for incarcerated parents and their families before and after release into the community.

We look forward to active participation in the NOVA- One Family Reentry Initiative collaboration comprised of the SFSD, the San Francisco Children of Incarcerated Parents Partnership, San Francisco Department of Public Health, San Francisco Probation Department, Walden House, the San Francisco Superior Court's Dependency Drug Court, San Francisco Human Services Agency and Community Works. Collectively we recognize that strong parent-child relationships aid in children's adjustment to their parents' incarceration, help to mitigate many of the negative outcomes for children associated with parental incarceration, improve the parent's reentry process, and reduce recidivism.

As you know Community Works' One Family program launched in the jails in 2009 and already provides meaningful, frequent, and consistent opportunities for children to remain connected to their parents while incarcerated and addresses the structural and cultural barriers that limit family reintegration for incarcerated parents. We have successfully implemented an expanded contact visiting program, have created child friendly visiting rooms and are providing a mandatory evidenced-based curriculum, Parenting Inside/Out, (PIO) for incarcerated parents. We look forward to being able to enhance family services and expand PIO to reach men and women post-release, to provide Family Transition Circles to help create a bridge to support parents' transition back into their families, and in collaboration with California Institute of Integral Studies and Jail Psychiatric services to support therapeutic interventions in custody.

Specifically Community Works agrees to:

- Hire 1 FTE to implement the evidenced based Parenting Inside Out curriculum with parents after reentry;
- Hire 1 FTE to facilitate Healing Circles with parents and caregivers—in custody and after reentry
- Attend monthly steering committee meetings with representatives from all participating organizations to make policy and program decisions affecting NOVA-One Family Reentry Initiative
- Participate in evaluation efforts.

Community Works fully supports the Sherriff's Department 2010 application to the Department of Justice, Office of Justice Programs' Bureau of Justice Assistance for funding under the Second Chance Act Family-Based Prisoner Substance Abuse Treatment Program. I am submitting this letter on behalf of the California Department of Alcohol and Drug Programs (Department) to express a strong support for the prison-based and re-entry substance abuse treatment programs in California.

- Official documentation that all service provider organizations collaborating in the project have been providing relevant services for a minimum of 2 years prior to the date of the application in the area(s) in which services are to be provided. Official documents must definitively establish that the organization has provided relevant services for the last 2 years; and
- Official documentation that all collaborating service provider organizations are in compliance with all local (city, county) and state/tribal requirements for licensing, accreditation, and certification or official documentation from the appropriate agency of the applicable state/tribal, county, or other governmental unit that licensing, accreditation, and certification requirements do not exist.
