-----------------	--

Proposal Summary

The Office of Economic and Workforce Development (OEWD) and its primary partners, City College of San Francisco and Synergy Companies, will enroll and train 150 WIA eligible men and women in the Green Building Pre-Apprenticeship Training Partnerships Program. The program's population will consist of a diverse mix of San Francisco residents, 100% of whom will be drawn from Clean Energy Workforce Training Program special populations. At least 25% of the participants will be women and the group will reflect San Francisco's ethnic diversity. OEWD will operate 3, 18 week (630 hour) training cycles with 50 participants in each cycle over the course of 18 months. The program is built on OEWD's successful CityBuild Academy pre-apprenticeship program. For each cycle, OEWD, City College of San Francisco, the No. Calif. Carpenters Regional Council and the No. Calif. Laborers Joint Apprentice Committee will partner to deliver a combination of classroom and hands on training in basic construction skills, general and job site safety training, introductory labor studies, math, workforce entry skills, and introductory electrical, plumbing and HVAC skills. The training will also include a Green Building phase consisting of environmental literacy, introduction to green building, energy fundamentals, retrofits and energy efficiency, water efficient buildings and retrofit, solar hot water installation and design principles, and solar electrical installation and design principles. Finally, all participants will complete a certified 40-hour Health and Safety Training for Hazardous Waste course taught by a local training provider.

The OEWD program targets San Francisco County specifically and the San Francisco Bay Area region generally because the area contains a critical mix of local government, business, education, and community leadership in policy development, programmatic initiatives, and educational offerings that have stimulated the demand for green business approaches. The region is home to a large number of green businesses and the local energy efficiency (EE) industry sector is projected to grow over the next several years. Moreover, local ordinances, investment in infrastructure projects and ARRA funding for local building projects have combined to create a market and demand for construction workers trained in green building practices. The OEWD program targets entry level jobs in two growth EE subsectors – energy retrofitting of existing homes and retro-commissioning of existing buildings and facilities – because these positions pay sustainable wages, are accessible to individuals with limited education, and require short-term training for placement. Much of the entry-level work in these two categories is performed by apprentices. The positions with the greatest growth potential include: carpenter, laborer, sheet metal worker, and roofer apprentices as well as weatherization specialist/building performance specialist, energy auditor/home energy raters, solar thermal installer and solar PV installers.

OEWD will refer its program graduates to local apprenticeship programs and place them with local contractors. The training and certifications participants receive during their training will make them quite marketable to contractors. Additionally, OEWD's position as the compliance and implementation vehicle for San Francisco's First Source Hiring Program offers the program unique advantage in leveraging jobs from local building and energy efficiency contractors to assist them to meet their First Source hiring obligations. OEWD's program goal is to enroll 150 individuals. We expect 128 or 85% to complete the 18-week pre-apprenticeship training, and for 115 or 90% of these graduates to be placed in jobs. After 6 months, we expect 98 or 85% of those placed to still be working. The career pathways for these new workforce entrants will be varied. Some may simply incorporate their green building and EE skills into their chosen craft work as they complete all the requirements for journey status. For others the training will open up new career opportunities in marketing and installing energy efficiency measures.
