Hi, Lisa –

I actually do think the League of CA Cities intends to take a support position, but there is no formal letter available yet to the public that I can find. I can ping the City's Lobbyist to check with them but as of right now, neither the League of CA Cities nor the CA State Association of Counties have taken formal positions.

Once I do get a letter of support (or not) I am happy to include for the file. As for the nature of this bill, San Francisco has been on the record in the past in its support of automated speed enforcement, as well as Vision Zero tools for pedestrian safety. This would be another attempt to restate this position for the record, including the adjustments based on community input that Assm Chiu has included in this latest version.

Best,
Sunny
