SUGGESTION: for three months, EVERY Supervisor, every City department head, and the top two-three layers of their direct reports should be REQUIRED to ONLY use Muni to get to and from work, and to get to and from meetings during their work day. No escorts, no protection, just on their own with their backpack and phone. Direct experience is the only way ANY of them will understand what the rest of us face.

I live in the Bayview, and used the T to commute to my downtown job. Before that I lived in the Mission and rode the 14. Currently I work from home but eventually we will all be back in the office.

ANYONE who thinks making Muni free is going to help anything has not used the system, certainly not in the past 10-12 years. By my observation roughly one-half of riders do not pay, and they are mostly ones who from their attire and gadgetry could easily afford the fare. Combine that with the non-payers who are drunk, drugged up, suffering a mental breakdown, criminally aggressive, panhandling, dragging bags of refuse and otherwise problematic, and it is small wonder that ridership has dropped off.

Even before the pandemic I tried to avoid Muni - if I could catch a ride with my spouse who drives to work a half-mile from my job I would do that even if it meant being an hour early. And if I could afford it on my "average person" salary I'd try Lyft.

Muni's problems are not based on the fares being too high. They are based on a high level of toxic, scary riders, and a general level of filth that is up with the transit system in Mumbai and Delhi (where I spent time some years ago).

If you remove the last very small barrier to toxic riders, you will lose most of the rest but with no benefit to the riders who are clean and who pay.

To get more riders on Muni, make it safe and clean. Block those who are using Muni as a place to camp for a few hours. Block those who are hassling other riders, stealing and panhandling. Otherwise you will get more riders but they will be the "wrong" kind and the system will deteriorate further.

Dear Supervisor Melgar,

I am writing to you as a resident of San Francisco to strongly urge you to vote in support of Supervisor Preston and Haney's ordinance for a three-month Free Muni pilot. The pandemic continues to burden disproportionately the working-class residents of our city and people of color, many of whom are our essential and front-line workers -- nurses, janitors, grocery store workers, restaurant staff, delivery drivers, security guards, shelter workers, and many more -- who have given so much to our community throughout this pandemic. And now when ridership is at all time low and people need free Muni the most, you voted against, even though you supported free Muni during your campaign.

Our City leaders must take bold steps to meet our Transit First mandate and bring public transit back strong. That means ramping up service, investing in operators and making Muni free. We must do all three. With renewed federal investments, the MTA and the City can do just that. Free Muni is a key part of the path forward. We need to pilot this now to get people back on Muni, put money back in struggling workers' pockets, and jumpstart our recovery. Piloting Free Muni in this way won't cost a lot, won't affect the MTA's timeline to restore service, and will benefit our public transportation system and our overall recovery. Most importantly, the Free Muni pilot will not impact the restoration of any lines in District 7. The timeline for lines to return is the sole decision of the MTA and this money is separate from the MTA operating budget.

The concerns you raised at the Board of Supervisors are no longer true. The MTA originally stated that the system could not handle the extra capacity because we were operating under COVID distancing restrictions that limited riders to about 50% of capacity, however, just last week at the TA meeting, the MTA shared that they plan to roll back social distancing and capacity restrictions by mid June, weeks before the pilot is set to begin. The timing of this pilot works perfectly with the lifting of restrictions which will dramatically increase capacity on our buses.

I strongly urge you to join the organizations below and vote to support Supervisor Preston and Haney's proposal for a three month Free Muni pilot. We are a Transit

First city and should do everything possible to support riders and encourage ridership.

Dear Supervisor Melgar,

I am writing to you on behalf of South of Market Community Action Network (SOMCAN), concern residents/riders and 19 organizations across the City to strongly urge you to vote in support of Supervisor Preston and Haney's ordinance for a three-month Free Muni pilot.

Here is a petition and attached you will find a list of San Francisco residents who signed the petition and a collective letter from 19 organizations across San Francisco urging you to support the Free Muni pilot.

The pandemic continues to burden disproportionately the working-class residents of our city and people of color, many of whom are our essential and front-line workers -- nurses, janitors, grocery store workers, restaurant staff, delivery drivers, security guards, shelter workers, and many more -- who have given so much to our community throughout this pandemic. We need to pilot Free Muni now to get people back on Muni, put money back in struggling workers' pockets, and jumpstart our recovery.

Piloting Free Muni in this way won't cost a lot, won't affect the MTA's timeline to restore service, and will benefit our public transportation system and our overall recovery. Most importantly, the Free Muni pilot will not impact the restoration of any lines, including in District 7. The timeline for lines to return is the sole decision of the MTA and this money is separate from the MTA operating budget.

The concerns you raised at the Board of Supervisors are no longer true. We truly hope that you will vote to support the three-month Free Muni pilot. We are a Transit First city and should do everything possible to support riders and encourage ridership.

Dear Supervisor Melgar,

Today we write to you as residents of this city, as community members, and as organizations that serve San Francisco's most vulnerable communities: low-income and working-class families, immigrants, City College students, seniors, people with disabilities and those without homes to urge you to vote in support of Supervisor Preston and Haney's ordinance for a three-month Free Muni pilot.

The pandemic continues to burden disproportionately the working-class residents of our city and people of color, many of whom are our essential and front-line workers -- nurses, janitors, grocery store workers, restaurant staff, delivery drivers, security guards, shelter workers, and many more -- who have given so much to our community throughout this pandemic.

Free Muni would benefit 52% of low income riders earning under $45,000 a year, 73% under $75,000, and 84% under $100,000. As you know, the Free Muni pilot is one vote short of the eight votes needed to override a mayoral veto and as someone who committed to free muni during your campaign, we hope that you will reconsider your vote and support the pilot.

We must take bold steps to meet our Transit First mandate and bring public transit back strong. That means ramping up service, investing in operators and making Muni free. We must do all three. The Free Muni pilot will not affect the MTA's timeline for restoring service and their 2-year budget, which is fully funded as a result of the large infusion of federal recovery funds.

The pandemic has had unprecedented rippling economic effects at the national, state, and local level. Transit ridership is at a historic low, fare revenue has plummeted, and people are reluctant to get back on public transit a year into the pandemic. With lines suspended and riders nervous, Muni is a fraction of its former self and car usage is on the rise.

A free Muni pilot will:

- Boost ridership during a time when ridership is at all time low
- Save frequent MUNI riders at least $81 a month
- Reduce traffic congestion
- Help the city reach their vision zero and climate goals

With that, we urge your support of Supervisor Preston and Haney's proposal for a three month free Muni pilot. We are a transit first city and should do everything possible to support riders and encourage ridership.
